A. and P. Basketballers Clip Putt-Par, 55-54

The A & P basketballers came from behind in the last minute to nip Putt-Par 55-54. The lead changed hands several times in the game as both teams displayed an excellent show of defense. Whitney was high scorer for the game with 20 points. Tilghman was high scorer for the Hawkeyes with 17 points. Four of the Hawkeyes scored in the double figures.

The Hawkeyes had a three-point lead at the half, 28-25, but Putt-Par quickly jumped ahead at the beginning of the second half. The lead again began to change hands frequently as neither refused to roll over and play dead.

With only six seconds to go Norris put the Hawkeyes out front by one point. A two-shot foul by Dail gave Merritt a good chance to put Putt-Par out front, but he missed both of these to end the scoring for the night.

This was the fifth win against three losses for the Hawkeyes. Last week they whipped White Cross 57-39, and Hillsboro forfeited a game when they didn't appear for a scheduled game. Thursday night the Hawkeyes travel to Eli Whitney for a game with them.

Harpicord Music Program Is Set Sunday At Gerrard

A program of music for the harpsicord will be presented Sunday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m. in Gerrard Hall on the University campus.

Sponsored by Petite Musicale, the program is open to the public at no charge. Guest performer will be Dr. Francis Hopper, professor of music and head of the organ department at the University of Louisville.

He will perform a group of solo pieces for the harpsicord. Assisting him will be Dr. Wilton Mason, UNC professor of music and director of the University Chorus, and Erim Fruchtman, UNC graduate student from Gainesville, Fla.

Dr. Hopper and Fruchtman will present a sonata by George Abel for harpsicord and viola da gamba. A Handel trio for recorder, harpsicord and viola da gamba will be performed on the program by Dr. Hopper, Dr. Mason and Fruchtman.

Last year Dr. Hopper appeared in two programs sponsored by Petite Musicale, one for harpsicord and one for organ.

Dr. Hopper has studied at the Union Theological Seminary in New York City where he earned both a bachelor's and a master's degree in music, and at the School of English Church Music in Chislehurst, England.

While studying in New York, he was organist for Sunday morning services at Carnegie Hall, and during Dr. Hopper's stay in England he gave frequent recitals at both Oxford and Cambridge. He has also given many performances throughout the mid-west.

Scenes At Colonial Inn And Speedway

Film Company Sets Hillsboro Agog When It Becomes Locale For Movie

Against the backdrop of a stock-car racing scenario, Hillsboro this week became "on location" to a Hollywood movie company, scheduled to complete today its local filming of a forthcoming television show.

Focal points of the film story were the colorful and historic Colonial Inn and the broad expanse of Orange Speedway.

A top film figure, a sprinkling of veteran character actors and a bevy of Hollywood-and-Broadway-wise directors, production experts, camera, sound, and lighting men, make-up artists and costumers arrived on Monday and went into action.

Excitement

And, the glamor of the movie industry was enough to set the community agog and bring out a respectable quota of curiosity seekers and celebrity followers.

Nobody was disappointed. The star, the familiar movie veteran, James Whitmore, the other actors, also well-known in their own right, directors, the producer, and the varied technicians were affable, friendly and cooperative to a man, expressed an interest in the community, and generally made themselves pleasant.

The Story

The story being filmed, with principal action at Colonial Inn and the Speedway, was explained by Producer Michel Grilikbes as one of the "I" series being produced by Warner Bros. for CBS television showing later this year. The show being produced here is one of 13 in the series, is entitled, "I, Buck Larson, Stock Car Driver." Directing the series is Frank McDonald, who has directed the Wyatt Earp series of TV movies and a few years back the "Man Against Crime" series which starred Ralph Bellamy.

Much of the film for the current show had already been made of previous races at Orange Speedway, but Speedway Co-owner Enoch Staley brought in a half dozen of the best known drivers, such as Buck Baker and others, for some closeup and other scenes. Basically, the producer explained, the story involved the conflict between the old pro racer, played by Whitmore, and the younger driver, played by Vic Morrow, who still sees glory and fame in his dare-devil pursuit. Morrow will be remembered as a stellar performer in "The Blackboard Jungle," "King Creole" and other movies. Jim Boles, a New York character actor frequently seen on television, played the clerk at Colonial Inn and David Winters, who appeared in the movie, "The West Side Story," plays the starry-eyed younger brother of Vic.

Finish Today

After shooting scenes at Colonial Inn Monday afternoon and evening, the action moved to the Speedway Tuesday where it will continue through today.

Other shows in the series have been filmed in other parts of the country, but for this week at least Hillsboro got a taste of the excitement and a look, at least, at the volume of work and preparation which goes into the production of only one short film story.

What Legal Control Means To You

"Prohibition" At Work

Before we take a look at the question of legal control of alcoholic beverages in Orange County, let's take a look at so-called "prohibition" at work here.

Certainly, no one will contend that we have built a wall around Orange County and no alcoholic beverages can seep through it into the county. We all know that many Orange County residents make occasional trips to Durham, Raleigh or elsewhere to bring back a few bottles for one purpose or another. And we all know that alcoholic beverages can be purchased from bootleggers in Chapel Hill, Hillsboro and elsewhere in the county. So, whether we are teetotalers or believe in moderate use of alcoholic beverages, we must admit that Orange County is "dry" in name only — that "prohibition" is not working here.

Question Not "Wet" or "Dry"

Therefore, the question involved in the local option election Tuesday, February 3, is not whether Orange County will be "wet" or "dry" but HOW alcoholic beverages will be sold. Is it not better to put alcoholic beverages on the shelves of rigidly controlled ABC stores than to have them peddled on the street by bootleggers?

Hundreds of leading North Carolina citizens, some of them formerly prohibitionists, have become convinced that the ABC system of legal control is far better than uncontrolled bootlegging. Numerous surveys have shown that the problems of alcohol are much less serious in ABC areas than in so-called "dry" counties.

There are many reasons for this, but the primary reason is that CONTROL of liquor—not its sale—is the prime concern of the state local ABC boards made up of outstanding citizens.

Profit Secondary

It is true that ABC stores and legal control bring millions of dollars to the local governing bodies where they operate. This money — $8,389,333.27 last year alone — is used for school public welfare, debt reduction and similar purposes. Profits are not the objective of the North Carolina ABC system, but how can any reasonable person argue that the profits are not better spent for public purposes than would be the case if they were left in the hands of criminals to be used in financing illegal bootlegging operations.

In other words, every dollar of profit made from ABC sales is a dollar taken from the bootlegger, and from Durham, Caswell or other legal stores.

Ten per cent of all ABC sales — more than $6,000,000 last year — go to the state where is placed in the general fund used for all state purposes except highways. This means that there is not a "dry" county in the state which has not already benefited materially from the ABC system. There is not a public school, not a state hospital, which has not shared in the profit of the system by receiving money which otherwise would have gone to the bootleggers.

Control is the Watchword

Nowhere in any ABC store is an effort made to promote sales but, in every ABC area the public records show effective activity against illegal sales and abuse of alcoholic beverages. The success of the units in the state ABC system is determined, not by their profits, but by their attack on crime and corruption, their reduction of excessive drinking and their promotion of law and order.

Members of the state ABC system last year allocated $758,063.22 for local law-enforcement, but no special law-enforcement funds are available to so-called "dry" counties. That is one reason bootlegging and alcoholic beverage violations are virtually non-existent in ABC counties and municipalities.

The North Carolina ABC system tends to promote respect for law in general and the control law in particular. It seeks to encourage temperance and discourage intemperance. And it takes the control of liquor out of the hands of bootleggers and puts it under rigid control by both local and state authorities.

Many Benefits

Adoption of the North Carolina system of legal control in Orange County will bring many benefits:

1. It will help eliminate bootlegging and the crime it breeds.
2. It will help to prevent sales to minors and children.
3. It will build new respect for the law.
4. It will provide its own funds for alcoholic beverage law-enforcement.
5. It will also provide money for alcohol education.
6. It will help Orange County business at home.
7. It will promote progress and prosperity in the county.
8. It will bring Orange County substantial revenues which can be used to hold taxes down and expand schools and other needed services.
9. It will put Orange County on the side of other progressive North Carolina counties which believe that legal control is far superior to bootlegging, hypocrisy and lawlessness.

Do Not Forget!

The election Tuesday, February 3, is not a "wet" or "dry" issue. It is not a question of liquor or no liquor. We will have alcoholic beverages (just as we do now) regardless of the result of the election. The question is: Shall we have them in supervised ABC stores under legal control or illegally peddled by uncontrolled bootleggers?

We believe that a study of the benefits of legal control will convince the vast majority of Orange County citizens that the North Carolina ABC system is far superior to the present system.

We urge you to vote FOR legal control and ask your friends and neighbors to do the same.
