THEY DID NOT TALK

Civilians have been thoroughly aware of the importance of not aiding the enemy through the system of talking too much and passing information or mere hearsay or by acting important and 'in the know' and thus confiding secrets to the indiscreet. But there have been few instances where the confidences placed in the press have been violated and newspaper men revealed important facts indiscriminately, and heedless of cost. The correspondents abroad have been taken into the confidence of officers and trusted with news, withholding vital information that might boom the sales of their sheet but putting the welfare of their country before the salary check from their boss.

In the recent invasion we find the trust placed in them by General Eisenhower, who met them in a press conference the middle of June and informed them that overseas operations would be undertaken with the month. He also said the attack was to be aimed at Sicily. This took the men by surprise although they had been used to strict confidence of the military authorities. This was an event that would make history with the approximate time and exact place given. They carried this news around for almost a month, wondering each day when the blow would strike, how it would be met. General Eisenhower had trusted them, his manner suggested he expected them to obey his order to keep silent as he would expect one of his men in uniform to obey his command.

This general is well liked and no wonder he is respected. He gave the newsmen the information to be sped to their public but they must keep their stories until he gave the command to fire. His trust in the press was not violated by one man of the hundred who listened to his voice that June day.

DANGER

The war news has been so good in recent months that most of us give less and less thought to the possibilities of bombings or serious acts of sabotage in this country. As a result, many town defense organizations, which a year ago bristled with activity, are now relaxing.

It is comforting to think that the danger of war coming to this country is over, but it is quite possible a false comfort for which our people will pay for dearly if they put too much faith in it. When we have defense organizations built up all over the country they should be kept on their toes while there is still any danger. And they should realize that is just the kind of let-down which is going on now which will invite our enemies to take a blow at our nation.

We are all glad to know that the Germans, the Japs and the Italians are being thrown back on all fronts. But it must not be forgotten that they still have plenty of equipment and could, if they wished still attempt raids on this country.

TELLING THE PRESIDENT

Labor leaders still seem to be giving orders to the President. As things now stand, they have told him that they will forget the 'Little Steel Formula,' which freezes wage adjustments at 15 per cent above what they were in 1941, unless he does something immediately to bring the cost of living down. There are none of us who would have any objection to the President doing something to reduce living costs, but labor leaders are the only ones which would use an 'or else' type of threat. It's a good thing, for example, that our farm leaders aren't of the same variety as labor leaders, or they might threaten to stop the production of food unless the farmers got better prices. It is still a mystery to most of the people in this country why labor has such a strong influence over the President. But we hope he will soon stop saying 'Yes, sir' to the labor leaders and will use this latest threat as an opportunity to 'tell them off.'

Camp Bradford, Norfolk, Va., July 30, 1943.

Dear Editor: I have been reading your paper for quite a while and enjoy putting in most of my extra time in reading about what is going on around home.

In the last two papers I was proud to read about the citizens planning a place of recreation and amusement, because Lincolnton is a good town, but could be improved by just a simple thing like that.

I will remind you again that I really enjoy reading your paper, and not only do I enjoy it, but many of the boys in my barracks also read it. They say it is an interesting paper. Keep up the good work. A regular reader. DAVID F. CAUDLE, Amphibious T. B. Barracks 36, NOB, Camp Bradford, Norfolk, Va.

Relatives and friends are invited to send in for publication in this column, news of interest concerning the boys who are serving in the Army, Navy, Marines or Coast Guard. Addresses of all service men are also wanted. Letters to this newspaper from service men will be published.

Special Notice: Persons who send in for publication the addresses of service men may wonder why only part of the address of the soldier overseas is published. The following paragraph from the Code of Wartime Practices from the Office of Censorship in Washington will explain: 'Except for troops in training camps in the United States, members of the armed forces should not be identified with military or naval units or ships... In publishing addresses use the War Department APO number or the Navy Fleet Postoffice, without any unit or ship identification.'

Ralph Brown Finishes Course At Gunter Field

Aviation Cadet Ralph Andrew Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Brown, this city, has completed the second phase of his flight training at the Army Air Forces Basic Flying School, Gunter Army Air Field, Montgomery, Ala., it was announced today. Prior to his arrival here, he had received his primary training at Douglas, Ga., where he obtained 60 hours in the air in primary training planes. He was appointed an aviation cadet November 25, 1942.

While at Gunter, Aviation Cadet Brown has logged approximately 70 hours in basic training ships. These flying hours include cross country navigation flights, night flights and formation flying. His advanced flight training will be given in another school in the vast Army Air Forces Southeast Training Center. After the completion of his advanced training, Cadet Brown will be rated a pilot in the army air forces.

State College Hints To Farm Homemakers

When beets are young and tender, they're really two vegetables in one. The tops county as green leafy vegetables, rich in iron and valuable vitamins. An the beet roots contain vitamin B1 and C.

In cooking beets, the important thing is to save the red color. That's why the home economists tell you to leave on the skins, the roots and part of the stems. Cook the beets whole, so there's no chance for the color to 'bleed.' When they're done drain the water and slip the skins off the beets. Slice for serving, or if you have tiny beets, serve them whole. Would you like to have our good Harvard Beet recipe? Write us.

If the beet tops are young enough to be tender, be sure to use these greens. Cook them like any other leafy vegetable—for only a short time in a small amount of water. You can serve the greens alone, or I think they make one of the best looking vegetable combinations when you serve the greens right along with the red beets.

When cooked and cooled, beets are a good salad vegetable. The red color makes a fine contrast with your salad greens. Be sure to wait until just before serving to mix the beets with more ingredients. For especially good beet salad, add chopped hard-cooked egg. Beets with grated cheese is another good combination.

Correct tools in good condition make the job easier; they save time and energy. Often the reason house work becomes drudgery is because of the lack of proper tools to do the job or because they are in poor condition.

Another time saver is a note book and pencil conveniently placed so that you can jot down things to be done and things to be bought. A written list will save many a step, while a mental list will cause many a stop.

THIS AD WAS NOT DESIGNED TO be conspicuous, yet hundreds of others will read it, just as you are doing. Isn't that proof that THE

Polhill Feed Company Enlists In Crusade For Food Production

The Polhill Feed Company has enlisted in a "Food for Victory Crusade," which is sponsored by the feed industry through Purina Mills. The purpose of the crusade is to increase our national food production by eliminating production losses due to faulty farm management, inadequate sanitation and wasteful feeding of livestock and poultry.

The Polhill store is one of approximately 7,000 Purina dealers who are joining hands all over the country in a spirit of unselfish patriotism to conserve feed and to eliminate one of the most serious bottlenecks of our war efforts—the production of more fighting food for our soldiers, war workers and Allies.

This "Crusader," in turn will enlist the farmers of the community, calling on them in their poultry houses and feed lots, to help them with a series of suggested management, feeding and sanitation practices which have been recommended by national and state agricultural authorities. Copies of the "Action Sheets" to be used are attached.

All farmers thus enlisted will be included on an "honor roll" displayed in the store and a copy forwarded to the secretary of agriculture in Washington.

The feed-let service is offered without charge to all poultry and livestock raisers regardless of the feed they use, and will be continued for the duration.

Nationally, the "Food for Victory Crusade" is sanctioned by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Office of War Information.

"And this be our motto"

"PRAISE the power that hath made and preserved us a nation! Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just, And this be our motto: 'In God is our trust!'"

Through the ages singing has been instrumental in arousing courage and uplifting faith. Today amidst world turbulence people are being urged to sing more. Individually and collectively, therefore, they are participating fervently and frequently in the singing of their national anthems.

The deep spiritual significance of the above inspiring declaration in the last verse of the national anthem of the United States of America is worthy of thoughtful meditation at this time, and serves to remind us of the wisdom of those words (Proverbs 3:5), "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding."

All through both the Old and the New Testament are accounts of victories and rejoicings by faithful ones who put their trust in God when in need of a sustaining power greater than their own limited human abilities. Their faith that righteousness must prevail, and that their strength was of God, was their assurance of ultimate victory.

Christ Jesus taught his disciples and followers the importance of recognizing and acclaiming God as Father of all. His earthly ministry was entirely devoted to urging all men to renew faith in God, to trust Him, and to seek an understanding of Him, and he proved through his healing work that this understanding was vitally necessary to their joy and happiness.

The following elucidating definition of God is given on page 587 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science: "The great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; intelligence;..."

God is Spirit. He is the only cause and creator, and man, created in His image and likeness, therefore is spiritual. Man is not material, mortal; he reflects Spirit and is immortal.

Knowing God as Principle enables us to discern that the real man in God's image is righteous in all his actions. Man, the perfect idea of God, divine Love, is loving and lovable, incapable of either hate or fear. Because God is good and has created everything good, man, His reflection, is the manifestation of good. The understanding of the allness of good eliminates any opposite belief, and demonstrates the nothingness and unreality of evil and its claims to power.

As we intelligently place more trust in God's ever-presence, His omnipotent power, and His plan and purpose for His creation, our happiness and success are ensured. We soon find ourselves expressing more harmony in our daily affairs; confusion gives way to calm and poise; intolerance is replaced by tolerance, and we awaken to a greater sense of love and unselfishness. We gain an understanding of real security and substance, proving that "they that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever."

As we strive to consecrate our thinking to good, to glorify God in all our activities, and trust His unerring guidance, we shall be able to prove true the words of Mrs. Eddy (Science and Health, p. 444): "Step by step will those who trust Him find that 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.'"
