Secretary Forrestal Reports
Vast Armada Dominates All
Ocean Forces—Says U. S.
Fighting Navy Has More

Washington, Aug. 30.—The Amer can fleet now numbers more than 1,150 can fleet now numbers more than 1,100 major fighting ships, Navy Secretary Forrestal disclosed today in reporting that 65,000 vessels of all types have been added to the Navy in the last five years.

This armada makes the U. S. "the greatest naval power on earth," Forrestal commented at a news conference with its building program "lit."

ence, with its building program, "lit-tle more than half finished."

He was asked how many ships have been turned over to other nations under the lend-lease and was unable to reply off-hand, but the Navy later issued a memorandum giving the total as 2,822. Of these, the memorandum said, 1,784 are classified as combatant ships and include large type landing Forrestal said the warships added to the Navy number more than three times those in the fleet just before the war started. This means the Navy has at least 1,150 ships of principal fighting types-battleships, aircraft carcruisers, destroyers and submarines.

These are the "spectacular" vessels

but it is the auxiliary ships, Forrestal continued, that make the victories saible by supplying the fighting addition to the Navy's vas growth in ships, Forrestal gave these figures on other expansion in the five years since the European war started. Aircraft—57,600 planes delivered air strength increased 20 times and air strength increased 20 times and still growing, with 30,000 planes to be delivered in the next 12 months. Ordnance—Torpedo production in-creased 40 times over 1939. Depth-charge production 60 times greater than five years ago; 125,000 antiair-craft guns and one million rounds of antiaircraft ammunition produced. Personnel—For every person serv-ing in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard in September, 1939, there are over 24 today. Combined strength

This column today is declicated to the memory of Charles D. (Block) Smith. This column today is declicated to the memory of Charles D. (Block) Smith, for twelve years head of the athletic department of the Lincolnton High School, and more recently first lieutenant in the United States Army, who died at Fort Taylor, Key West, Florida, last Friday morning. Each of us connected with The Times feel a personal loss at his death, and this goes, we can safely say, for the C. E. Boyles reported today that his son, Harlan, who is a patient at the polio emergency hospital in Hickory, is improving and has been removed from Ward 2 to Ward 9, a convalescent ward.

Harlan, said his father, has almost complete use of his body from his waist up and shows considerable improvement in the use of his lower sition, in frequent communication. waist up and shows considerable improvement in the use of his lower limbs.

"Block may be gone from our midst but his dry wit, good humor, sport-manship qualities and friendliness will never be forgotten by chose who knew him. There was only one Block Smith, there will never be another like him.

"Just as plain as an old shoe, Block was liked and loved and admired by friend and foe alike, and we can truthfully say that in the eight years we knew him never did we hear an unkind word uttered about him.

"At the time the Grim Reaper called Block to his final resting place, he was special services officer at Ft. Taylor, Key West, Fla., and doing a bangup job in this capacity. In fact, I am afraid Block was carrying too heavy a load for his 43-year-old shoulders. He was a glutten for work and heavy a load for his 43-year-old shoul-ders. He was a glutton for work and he put every ounce of energy at his command into whatever the task. He never went at anything without put-ting his heart into it, be it coaching, waiting on tables ,cooking, teaching, playing a game or a thousand and one other things Block could do. "That's how Block suffered the in-juries that proved fatal to him. In a post softball game, July 29, between the officers team and the navy de-tachment at Ft. Taylor, he made a slide into second base during the heat

"A great worrier, Block told his wife a few days before his death the morning of August 25 that he was going to die. He wanted to write a will she wouldn't let him, and passe it off by telling him he'd be up and about in a few days. But Block knew he wasn't well inside. Complications had set in followng the broken leg, and he developed a lung infection which caused his death.

"Block was one of the best known athletic coaches in North Carolina sporting circles. He never missed the bull sessions at the Southern confer-ence basketball tournaments each year, an annual meeting place for coaches of all sports, and he attended six football coaching schools, one under the direction of the immortal Knute Rockne.

Knute Kockne.

"His continual good-natured chat-ter was a feature of all football work-outs held by his Guilford College Quakers, and in the good old days of plenty of gasoline it was not uncom-nion for several Greensboro citizens to sit on the sidelines at Block's prac-tices and listen to his witty conversation of his players.

"Freshmen reporting for their first drills used to hear Block bellow: 'I don't care how many fancy tricks you have in the bag, you can't play football unless you can block and tackle." No truer words were ever spoken.

Block's last two football teams not only failed to win a game but they scored only once in two seasons. That eme on an intercepted pass, I think.

"But despite the odds against him and his teams, Block Smith won the admiration and love and respect of his opponents for the sportsmanship, fighting qualities and fair play he instilled into the youth under his wing. They battled tooth and nail until the end no matter what the odds against them, and often surprised by nolding their football opponents to ow scores at halftime.

"Guilford teams under Block were amateur in the first sense of the word, however, and they played the game for the fun of it.
