

A MADMAN WITH A SCYTHE.
TRIES TO MOW DOWN A MOB OF EXCITED PEOPLE ON FOURTH AVENUE.

A tall, slightly built man, with gray chin whiskers, got off a Fourth Avenue car at the corner of Twenty-eighth street last night. His shirt was crumpled and soiled and his soft slouch hat was mud-stained. He held a scythe in his right hand, whose long curved edge glittered in the gaslight. Half a dozen people paused when the stranger threw off his hat and began to cut the air with his scythe. Some one in the crowd shouted:

"Get an officer and have him arrested."
 The man still mowed down sections of atmosphere and appeared unconcerned. A cabman named Williams got down from his box and approached him. Williams struck the scythe with the but end of his whip, but did not knock it from the man's grasp. The cabman's attack was the signal for a violent outbreak on the part of the madman. He drew his fingers along the clear, white edge, and, swinging the murderous weapon above his head, dashed into the crowd. There were fully two hundred people on the block at the time, and they fled toward Twenty-ninth street. The madman shouted hysterically:

"I will kill them all. I am going to kill them all," and ran after the frightened men and boys. Fifty people had gathered in the rear. At the corner of Twenty-ninth street half a dozen men were close at his heels. He suddenly turned and shouted:

"I can kill them all. I am going to kill John L. Sullivan and all the rest of them."
 A gain the clean, white scythe glinted and the madman dashed among the people. They fell right and left and the lunatic passed between them. Crowds had collected on the opposite side of the thoroughfare and shouted all sorts of advice to the frightened people in the hallway.

Across the street ran the lunatic, and the people there fled in terror. An agile young fellow attempted to trip him up, and another tried to catch him around the neck. These devices were, however, futile, and the cries of "Police" were heard on all sides.

The lunatic was probably not on the block more than ten minutes altogether, but the panic he created drew people from all over the city. Before the officer arrived another cabman attacked him. He held a heavy whip in his hand, and his first blow fell on the hand clutching the scythe. The lunatic's eyes bulged in their sockets, and with a wild shriek he ran at his assailant. The cabman met him firmly and battered him over the head and shoulders with his whip until the madman at length drove him into a hallway for refuge. The man with the scythe danced up and down on the pavement. His attention was turned away for a second, and the cabman darted out and with a well-aimed blow knocked the scythe from his hand. The cabman bent to pick it up, but the lunatic was too quick for him. He caught it by the edge and attempted to job the wooden handle down the cabman's throat. At this juncture officer Brownlie, of the Twenty-first precinct, swung his club and sent the scythe spinning in the air. Then he caught the lunatic by the collar and shook him. At the station house the prisoner, after a great deal of questioning, said that his name was Patrick Clarkson, and that he was a gardener, living at No. 595 Second avenue. Sergeant Fitzgerald committed him on the charge of being a disorderly person. After his hands, which were cut, had been bound up, a three cornered file was found in his pocket.—New York World.

No repentance can ever wipe out the past, or make it be as though it had not been; but the remorse of a fine character may be transmuted into a permanent source of nobler views of life and the world.—Leslie Stephen.

To the Public:
 Certain printed posters having been put up in and about the town advertising an excursion from Bennettsville to Danville, and setting forth that the Rog Muffin Club would go to Danville with the excursion and give an exhibition for the benefit of the Baptist church at this place:

And, whereas, on last Sunday night it was announced from the pulpit that this was done without the authority of the officers of the church, I wish to state, in my own vindication, that the authority to do so was given to me by brother Lipscombe, the pastor, at my house in the presence of my family at least, and those present so understood it at the time, and I had the posters put up, believing it right at the time.

I have received from the Baptist church in Winston the following authority duly signed:
 We, the members of the Baptist church of Winston, give Rob't Harris the right to show any where in the United States, and the proceeds are to go to the benefit of the said church of Winston.

DR. BIGGERS' HUCKLEBERRY CORDIA
 It is THE GREAT SOUTHERN REMEDY for the bowels. It is one of the most pleasant and efficacious remedies for all summer complaints. As a season when violent attacks of the bowels are so frequent, some speedy relief should be at hand. The weakest mother, leaning sleep in nursing the little one, should use this medicine. Dose, a bottle. Send 25 cents to Walter A. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga., for Huckleberry Cordia. Price, 50c, and $1 a bottle.
