—It is said that Dr. McDow has appealed to the postoffice authorities to protect him against the anonymous letters he daily receives, threatening his life or denouncing his conduct.—Exchange.

If Dr. McDow had as much dread of the wrath of God as he ought to have, these anonymous letters would be a small matter with him. There are some things, as Dr. McDow will find one of these days, that are not anonymous, and which the post office authorities will have no control over.

 N. C., June 20th, 1889.—
Notice of Removal.

On or about the first day of July next, the National Bank of Greensboro will remove to its new banking house on the corner of South Elm and Washington Streets.

After a successful career of thirteen years, the business of this institution has outgrown the capacity of its old office and made it necessary to have more room and greater conveniences for the accommodation of its increased patronage.

With a grateful appreciation of the generous support which it has received from the citizens of Greensboro and the surrounding country, and wishing to do all in their power to merit a continuance of the same, the stockholders have erected a handsome, commodious and substantial structure, with all the appliances for ensuring safety, and all the conveniences for facilitating the business of its patrons known to modern architecture.

It contains a vault, which is absolutely fire-proof, and a burglar-proof safe, of the most approved material and workmanship; weighing 30,000 pounds and protected by the best Time Locks. This safe contains, in addition to the space appropriated for the use of the Bank, forty-eight deposit boxes which will be let at a moderate rental to those who desire absolute protection against fire and burglary for their private papers and valuables. These boxes can only be opened by the simultaneous use of two keys, one of which is kept by the depositor and the other by the cashier, and neither can open the box without the presence of the other.

With an experienced and efficient corps of officers and clerks, with an ample and well furnished office in the commercial centre of the city, with the best improvements for the rapid and accurate dispatch of business, and with abundant means; the management extends a cordial greeting to their numerous friends and the general public, with the confident assurance of their ability to meet the legitimate requirements of all who may favor them with their patronage.
