A DAY'S EVENTS.

WHAT OUR REPORTERS SEE AND HEAR

And What Other People Tell Them—News Briefly Noted, Personal Notes &c.

Read the new ad of Houston and Bro. in today's WORKMAN.

Weather indications: For North Carolina, fair, colder; northwest winds; fair Wednesday.

The children of Mr. B. M. Cates, Supt. of the Crown Cotton Mills, are beginning to whoop with the whooping cough.

Don't forget the entertainment to be given at the Armory Thursday night, by the Young Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church.

THE WORKMAN is sorry to learn that Mr. J. R. Hardin lost a good horse yesterday from pneumonia, having taken cold on distemper.

Uncle Cesar, the colored man who so faithfully serves Judge R. P. Dick, has been quite poorly for some time, but is able to be up again.

Married this morning at 9 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, East Washington street, by Rev. E. L. Stamey, Mr. Lee A. Chance of Charlotte, and Miss Mary Yates.

Mr. Bryant Ward, a watchman for the Crown Cotton mills in this city, died at about 3 o'clock this morning, leaving a wife and two children. THE WORKMAN extends its sympathies for the bereaved.

Go to See Them

The old reliable firm of E. M. Caldwell & Co. is carrying a beautiful line of china crockery, glassware, etc., etc. They have an important announcement on the 4th page of today's WORKMAN. Read it.

Fair Weather.

When the sun blazed out and flung long spangles of burning light from his chariot at the time of his setting last evening, those who saw the sight predicted a clear day for the morrow, and so it was. Many an eye greeted the sun this morning as the face of a long absent friend who had just returned from a distant journey. Glorious day, so bright and fair.

Open Today.

The Fishplate Clothing House is in full blast today, and gentlemen are in supplying themselves with clothing at figures which they themselves confess to be reasonable. The store room is finely fitted up, the goods are there in immense quantities and extensive variety, and the inducements to buy are all that could be asked.

The advertisers, Messrs Rankin, Howlett, Matthews and Crawford understand their business and take pleasure in waiting on customers.

Great Excitement at High Point.

From Mr. D. A. Hopkins who is here today from High Point it is learned that there is great excitement in that place over what is known as Slaughter's Patent Bed Brace. Numbers of people have invested in State and County rights. The Messrs. Pickett Bro. have bought the State of Missouri, Mr. Rufe Welborn has bought Tennessee, the Elwood Cox Co. have bought Virginia, and perhaps other states. Egan and Payne have bought North Carolina, and are supposed to have sold about half the state.

MIRRED DOWN SURE ENOUGH

The Little Mule Couldn't Pull the Wagon Out

Everybody likes to see things done in a sure enough way, and it has been said that whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well. And the saying is just as applicable to getting mired down, or stuck in the mud, as anything. What is the use of having mud so shallow that it will scarcely come over your shoe tops? And what is the use of talk about being mired down, just as if you were mired sure enough, when the hubs of your wagon are still above the ground? Such as that is child's play. There may have been a time when you could have made an interesting story of an instance where a man's wheels were mired half way up to the hub, or even quite up to the hub, but such a story would fall flat if related now in this community, simply because such things have been laid in the shade by recent events. A wagon belonging to John Whittington was mired yesterday evening on the alley in the rear of the Odell Hardware Co's store, that the mud came clear over one of the hubs so that it couldn't be seen, and the end of the axle on that side went clear out of sight. There was a little mule hitched to the wagon, but the little mule could do nothing in the way of getting out of such a "scrape." The mule was unshined, the load was thrown off and the wagon was carried out by hand. Mr. M. I. Stewart, whose two eyes beheld the scene, never saw the like before, and he says it was the most mired wagon he saw down that has ever come under his observation.

This year of 1891 may be famous for many things, such as the year that we first had a Railroad Commission, or the year that General Sherman died, but it will at least deserve to be remembered as the year of the great mire, when Mr. So and So got stuck so deep in the mud that only the body of his wagon could be seen above the surface. Why not have a sure enough case of pure mud?

Rev. B. W. Mebane.

This gentleman, who came to the city some days ago to witness the interment of his mother's remains which were brought to this place from Laredo, Texas, and only arrived Sunday night, is now pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of Maysville, Ky. He went to Madison this evening, will return Thursday, and on Friday will start back to his Kentucky home. His brother, Dr. D. C. Mebane, of Parsons, Pa., has already started to his home at the North.

THE WORKMAN was pleased to meet Rev. B. W. Mebane after long absence in the west, where we are pleased to know that he is doing well.

A Bad Wind, &c.

THE WORKMAN saw here today Mr. J. L. Hardin and Mr. C. C. Neese, of the Company Mills store, near Tabernacle, and Mr. Hardin said in answer to the question as to the condition of his mercantile interest, that trade had been quite fair, much of it resulting from the bad condition of the roads which hindered persons from coming to town for their supplies. This suggested the application of the old saying, "It's a bad wind that blows nobody any good."

O thou gigantic mudsill, what hast thou not wrought in this great and wide country of ours?

ABOUT FOLKS YOU KNOW.

Personal Notes of Interest Caught on the Fly.

Mr. W. M. Parker, of Archdale, was here this morning on his way to Durham.

Mr. Benjamin Millikan ex-Sheriff of Randolph and Mr. G. S. Bradshaw were in the city today.

Dr. Wm. Staley and Mr. C. P. Smith, of Liberty, came up to day on a visit to the city, and will return home tonight.

Mr. Peter P. Yates returns tonight to his position with Newbold and Sons, Baltimore, after a brief vacation with friends in this city.

The Companionless Dead.

There is quite a field for pensive thought when one sees a care inclosing a casket in which reposes the body of some departed member of the human race—the sleeper all unconscious of the noise and bustle of the public highway being borne to some distant spot for sepulture. It is an occasion for pensive thought. But there was something rather unusual on the platform of the R. & D. Railroad here this morning. There was a case on which was written—

"J. W. A. DANLY,

Lynchburg, Va."

and a certificate of death signed by Dr. E. M. Witten.

Numerous enquiries failed to elicit anything very definite, and presently the corpse was trundled aside to await further orders. The fact was stated on the cover—"Passenger has ticket." But it seems that the "passenger" had not turned up, and so the silent sleeper, companionless as he was in another sense, was companionless also in respect to his visible escort.

But of what real consequence was it that this poor lump had no escort on its journey to the distant cemetery if the departing soul could say as did the Psalmist:

"Thou art with me. Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me"

Dull Everywhere.

Persons who think Greensboro is dull, and do not look beyond the bounds of the city and its environs should post themselves as to the country elsewhere. THE WORKMAN had reason to know that there was as much or more depression just now elsewhere as here, but finds the view corroborated by persons who have recently come in from abroad. Mr. Will C. Ogburn, a young man of Flat Rock, [this county, who went to Texas some thirteen months ago, returned to this place from Fort Worth, Texas, this morning. From him we learn that business was dull in all the towns through which he came. One of the reasons for this stagnation of business is the excessive rain fall which has been general in the country.

The effect has been the same as would be from the stoppage of trains on our great trunk lines. This should be understood and an allowance should be made for the heavy rains just at this time.

The Bacon Walked.

Some hungry rogues made a good haul of bacon from the basement store room of one of our citizens last night, taking a dozen or so of pieces. Very little trouble was required to get in, which was by forcing aside the lower part of the door, by which the bolt was cleared and allowed the door to open. Still the rogues deserve to be caught, and it is hoped that they will be.
