Mr. Cleveland Writes to a Virginian.

WINSTON, Sept. 3.—J. E. M. Wright, of Lynchburg, one of Virginia's leading Democrats, and a personal friend of Grover Cleveland, showed me a letter today from the Democratic candidate for President. Among other things Mr. Cleveland says:

I join with you in anticipation that the Democracy of the nation will present a solid front to the enemy in the pending campaign and that it will be actuated by the common desire to reinstate the principles which we profess in the national council. I am pleased with your confident predictions as to the action of your State and hope that all who believe in the principles of Democracy will have abundant occasion for congratulation in November next.

A Serious Riot.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 3.—A special from Wilkesbarre, Pa., says: A riot occurred this morning on the Wilkesbarre and Eastern railroad now in course of construction. One of the contractors employs 150 negroes whom he brought from Virginia. The negroes declared they were brutally treated and several times they rebelled only to be beaten into submission by the white bosses armed with revolvers and steel knuckles. The negroes were watched day and night so they could not escape, but this morning twenty negroes gathered together and fought the white bosses with clubs and stones and escaped from the camp. Two of the negroes were shot. One is seriously wounded.

A gentleman said here after hearing Senator Ransom's speech that it was one of the easiest things in the world to be a Democrat, and that he felt glad that he belonged to that party.

There will be a regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce tonight, at which officers will be nominated for next year and the new tobacco factory discussed. Let attendance be full.

With such a small stock of fruits of all kinds it is well that the water melon wagon still continues to visit us selling a pretty fair melon for a nickel. Nothing is more popular on the market than a water melon, and of nothing else that is palatable can one buy more for a nickel.

THE WORKMAN heard today that Madison had a grand old time on Saturday at the speaking. Mr. Lindsay met Senator Ransom on the stump, and found more stumps than he counted on. Lindsay spoke first, Ransom followed and Lindsay had another turn: It is said that when the speaking was over Lindsay was worsted, but the Democrats were so highly enthused that they sang the Dead March for their opponents in advance of the 8th of November obsequies.

It takes a very, very sorry white man to represent to a young girl whose suitor he is that he has a first-class house and home to take her to, when in fact he does not own even a log cabin; and on the other hand very, very simple is the girl who will believe the stories told on such occasions when there is nothing to depend on but the bare statement of the man, and he a stranger. But we all are more or less like the poet, who says: "Tis better to have loved and lost, Than never to have loved at all."

OPENS NEXT SUNDAY.

The main auditorium of the new Methodist Protestant Church on Lee Street will be opened for public service next Sabbath at 11 o'clock, a. m., on which occasion a sermon will be preached by Rev. Thos. J. Ogburn, pastor of the Henderson Church. Those who have never heard him will do themselves a service by hearing him next Sunday, and those who have heard him before will most likely desire to hear him again—in fact all who attend will feel that they have been amply repaid in the earnest and able presentation of gospel truth on the occasion. Do not fail to come. Preaching at 8:15 by Rev. J. R. Ball.

Very spirited speeches were made in the Republican Convention here on Saturday by Messrs. Jas. E. Boyd and Thomas Settle. Col. Boyd spoke in response to vote the of the county convention nominating him for nomination for Governor at the State Convention soon to occur. Col. Boyd said that, of course, there was as yet no knowledge of the fact who would obtain the nomination, but if it were tendered to him he would not decline. Mr. Settle spoke in response to an invitation from the convention to make a speech, and occupied a half hour or more in his remarks which were well received and cheered by the Republicans present.

There are already numerous indications of the approach of Autumn. The drought had reddened many of the forest leaves, and the cool nights remind one of a falling barometer and morning fogs. These changes, as life advances, seem to come closer together than they were wont in earlier days, and the transitions take place like a dream, summer, autumn, winter succeeding each other almost without notice.
