RELIGIOUS REVIVALS AND POLITICAL REVIVALS.

If one had time and were so disposed he might write quite extensively on some of the points of resemblance between revivals of religion, so called, and revivals of politics. Human nature is the same every where, and a great many persons can be found who are only really zealous in certain seasons, whether it be in politics or religion.

It has long been the case, especially in North Carolina, to hold protracted and camp meetings at the close of the Summer, when the crops have been laid by and the fodder has been pulled, and the habit has become pretty general in many of the churches to expect a forward movement at such season only. We need not discuss the correctness of the principle involved, but simply state the fact.

But while men are zealous in religion at certain seasons only, the same is true in politics. The masses are generally quiet except when a political campaign is on hand, but when the campaign is begun it is necessary to get up an enthusiasm, and an effort is at once made with that view.

Now we might and we do condemn the excess into which many persons are led, but much of the noise and confusion that exists is one of the necessary evils of politics. The best Christian in the land can only deplore these excesses and guard against them in his own person, but if he is intelligent and patriotic he cannot be indifferent to the principles involved in the campaign. Let him choose for himself the party with whom he is to affiliate.

It is a great pity that there are people here and there who have no toleration for those outside of their party, provided the others claim to be in the right.

This is a time for the exercise of a good deal of charity.

CLEVELAND CHEERED

When G. N. Weaver had finished his speech in the courthouse today there were three cheers given for Grover Cleveland. The cheers were so loud and hearty as to give full proof of the hold that Mr. Cleveland has upon the affections of all the people.

It is estimated that three-fifths of the crowd cheered the name of Cleveland, while a number of Cleveland men present did not join in the demonstration.

A SUICIDE IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Col. W. P. Canady, of North Carolina, ex-Sergeant at Arms of the United States Senate, committed suicide this morning in his room here by blowing out his brains with a revolver.

At six o'clock this morning a messenger summoned J. Q. A. Houghton Canady's partner in the brokerage business, to Canady's room where Canady told the former that during the night two negroes had entered the house, bound and gagged him and taken two thousand dollars deposited in a safe by Houghton last evening.

According to a boarder in the house early this morning he heard a tapping sound in the room below and going down found Canady loosely bound to a door knob with a piece of night gown stuffed in his mouth. When Houghton heard Canady's story he accused him of subterfuge to hide the theft of the money by himself and went out to get a warrant for Canady's arrest.

Canady went into his office and blew out his brains. Canady's wife and son, from whom he separated, live in Wilmington, N. C.

Canady left a note to Houghton saying: "After your conduct this morning I have no further use for life."

Mrs. Lease stumped the State of Kansas against Senator Ingalls, and after he was defeated Mrs. Lease made a speech in Washington and invited Ingalls to a joint discussion. Ingalls declined and replied that there were only two classes of individuals who scalped a foe after death and they were an Indian and a woman.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin on Tuesday rendered a decision declaring the apportionment made by the extra session of the Legislature invalid.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote the following: "Was taken with a severe cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally resulted in consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined that if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above.
