"Log Cabin Girls Are Too Good to Keep."
(Tune: "Jealous.")
(Also composed just before dinner.)
Log Cabin girls can ride and box and cuff,
But Log Cabin girls are never crude or rough;
Log Cabin girls are full of pep and vim,
Gee! how they can play basketball and swim!
Log Cabin girls have a 'nawful appetite,
By one o'clock the dinner's out of sight.
They're never quiet until they go to sleep,
Log Cabin girls are just too good to keep!

Small Town Likely to Supplant Large City

About the most important thing that has happened to the United States—and, for that matter, to all other civilized countries—during the past quarter century or so has been the growth of cities. In 1900 only 40 out of every 100 Americans lived in communities of more than 2,500 population; now the number is 52, at least. While Greater New York was taking in nearly 3,000,000 new citizens, or about the total population of the 13 colonies before the Revolutionary war, 21 other New York communities of 25,000 or more gained about 1,000,000, and the population of all the rest of the state stood practically still.

A similar process has given Greater London more than 7,500,000 people, and Tokyo, in the land of cherry blossoms, more than 5,000,000. Such populations scare some people, who predict that the whole United States will soon be one huge, unmythologized metropolis. Big cities are certainly a new thing in history. Babylon, the metropolis of antiquity, is supposed to have had a poor million in her days of splendor; Rome something less than a million; Athens, which gave the world so much imperishable beauty and wisdom, only 200,000. London was a famous capital in the Fifteenth century, with 40,000; Nuremberg and Strassburg were centers of art and commerce with no more than 20,000 apiece. One wouldn't look for a good hotel in such towns nowadays.

But the monster human lives may not have everything their own way forever. Cities grow because people think it worth while, in dollars and cents, to live in them. They will stop growing when it no longer pays. According to some shrewd observers, the time of smaller cities is about here. With electric power, which can be set down in a little town as cheaply as in a big one, there is no reason why this should not be so. When a factory gets too big its overhead may eat up its profits. The same thing is sometimes true of cities.

Perhaps the future lies with smaller groupings of population—big enough to be sociable and amusing, small enough to let everyone have sufficient fresh air, sunlight and room to stretch. Perhaps tomorrow belongs to Athens, not to Babylon.—Collier's Magazine.

Rose Trellis Adds to Appearance of Garden

An alluring little rose trellis is a fascinating adjunct to any country or suburban home. Even the amateur carpenter can easily construct one since it is little more than an arch over a seat. The arch is made of lattice-work, so that the climbing vine may find a hold for its tendrils. A bed of open-work work for the seat is in keeping with the airy nature of the trellis. The whole should be painted either white or green; but white is the more effective as a background for the greenery of the vines and the bright color of the pink or red roses. A comparatively small yard will have space for this charming bowyer.

Water Systems on Farms

The development of water systems has lifted a heavy burden from the shoulders of every one on the farm. It means freedom from back-breaking drudgery for the housewife, to have running water in the house for every need. Outdoors it means better live stock and greater profits, with less time spent in monotonous chores. Of great importance, too, is the real fire protection it brings.

A good water system can be purchased and installed for about the price of an ordinary automobile. The upkeep is much less. It is, indeed, a long stride from water carried in jars and skins to running water on the farm, piped into every building and every room if desired. Modern manufacturing efficiency has made it possible at a cost surprisingly low.

Home Owner Wants Comfort

Home must be a thing of beauty, a birthplace for better ideas, for higher goals, and for a more liberal education. America is reading; its children are coming in contact more and more with the beautiful things of life, and as they know them so they will in turn create. The very start of beauty in life must come in the home, and the man who owns his home can take up the task of beautifying as no renter can hope to do. The man who owns his own home is not satisfied with what, as a renter, he will put up with. He wants better heating, better lighting and finer gardens. He wants them and, truly wanting them, he gets them.

Cautious Somnambulist

Blinks had a way of walking in his sleep—a falling of which he was greatly ashamed. Early one morning, after a long absence, he returned, with a pair of trousers rolled up and tucked under his arm.
"Where in the world have you been?" his wife demanded sternly.
"Down to the office."
"But why the trousers under your arm?"
"Oh—I thought I might meet some one."—American Legion Weekly.
