Meetings to Discuss Acute Problems of Tobacco Industry

"The tobacco problem is more acute than we expected." This was the opening remark by Chairman Carl T. Hicks at the Farm Bureau flue-cured tobacco advisory committee meeting here Oct. 22. He was referring to the low prices farmers are now receiving, the large amount of tobacco being taken by the stabilization corporation, the carryover of tobacco from crop years 1955 through 1961, and the unfavorable trend in tobacco exports.

Because of the erratic and unfavorable tobacco prices thus far this season, the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation has received an increasing proportion of the total sales each passing week during the marketing season.

The anticipated increase in production of 78 million pounds over last year is expected to push the supply of tobacco up to 2.7 times the expected disappearance. A desirable level of supply is generally considered to be about 2.5 time disappearance.

Over the past years, this country has not stepped up its annual exports to keep pace with the increasing demand for tobacco. As a result, farmers in the U. S. are producing a much smaller proportion of the world tobacco supply than years ago. . . one-third today compared to the two-thirds of the world supply produced by this country in the late 1930's.

After reviewing the problems facing producers, the 22 members of the Farm Bureau committee called for area meetings to explain the situation to farmers as an aid to the membership in formulating policies to correct the problems in the tobacco industry.

The date and place each of the four meetings, all of which will begin at 2:00 p. m., will be held are: Nov. 1, courthouse in Clinton; Nov. 5, Guilford County Agricultural Center in Greensboro; Nov. 6, courthouse in Oxford; and Nov. 7, army in Tarboro.

The committee also listed several possible corrective actions to take to improve the situation for consideration by the membership. They include: (1) acreage-poundage quotas, (2) control by USDA on the varieties of tobacco released for farmers, (3) uniform lighting conditions in warehouses for grading tobacco, and (4) market the tobacco so that the grader will not know whose tobacco he is grading.

State Farm Bureau President B. C. Mangum said there are some real problems in the tobacco industry today and urged all growers to attend these meetings.

A simple moisture test for silage is to squeeze a handful. If it springs right back it's too dry. If it comes back gradually it's just right. If it remains in a compact mass it is too wet.
