Egg Industry Flapping Wings As Quality Program Pays Off

Egg production is well on its way to becoming a $100 million business in North Carolina, says C. P. Parrish, in charge of extension poultry work at North Carolina State College.

Recent figures show that Tar Heel producers sold 192 million dozen eggs in 1962 with a value of over $72 million. Parrish expects another increase in 1963. Many new poultry houses are being built. Some old ones that have been empty are being filled again.

"With our proximity to markets, and strong possibility of having additional markets in the near future, there is no reason why North Carolina should not expand production of both commercial and hatching eggs," Parrish says.

The poultry specialist believes one of the chief reasons why the Tar Heel egg industry is vigorous and growing is because producers have been willing to tax themselves for two very worthwhile programs."

One is an inspection program; the other a consumer education and promotion program. Each complements the other, Parrish says.

The inspection program assures the housewife that she is getting eggs of the quality and grade indicated. "The aggressiveness with which this program has been pushed has created respect for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture's Egg Grading and Inspection Service," Parrish says.

The egg promotion program, on the other hand, has helped acquaint people both in and out of state with the high quality of North Carolina eggs. "North Carolina eggs no longer have to be disguised on Northern markets," Parrish says. "They are readily received and command respect."

Tar Heel eggs have been given a personality symbol, the "Mr. Goodforyou" sign which is placed on many stores. The industry also is laboring to make North Carolina known far and wide as the "Official Good Egg State."

Parrish believes these industry supported programs have increased for the producers and protected consumers. "They justify the continue support of both the consumer and producer," he added.

HDC Ladies Study Hobbies

Mrs. H. C. Lewis and Mrs. G. L. Summerlin were hostesses to the Summerlin's Home Demonstration Club at their home Friday.

The club song was used to open the program. Mrs. Carl Ivey was in charge of the devotional. Miss Beth Slocum assistant Home Economics Agent gave an interesting demonstration on "Developing A Hobby." Following the demonstration, she showed several articles that had been made as a hobby.

Arts and Crafts, International Relations, and Music leaders reported. Members were asked to attend the District meeting to be held in Fayetteville Thursday.

Mrs. E. J. Summerlin led the group in a contest during the Recreation period. Mrs. Ethel Kornegay of Scott's Store Club was a visitor.

Barbara Summerlin assisted the hostesses in serving Cherry o'cream cheese pie and sandwiches.
