DUPLIN COUNTY IS MOVING RAPIDLY TOWARD INDUSTRY

(From Goldsboro News-Argus)

Duplin County has moved forward with commendable speed in its decision to create an industrial and agriculture commission to work for expanded industry and balanced agriculture. Voters approved authorization of a special tax levy to set up the new department.

We think that other counties should note one of the primary objectives of the Duplin plan. The county leaders studied the census records and saw how year after year there was a large out-migration of its people to other states, other counties. Generally the abandonment of farms by tenants and small operators produced a new economy with higher income for the farmers. Machines were now required and that made necessary bigger acreages for successful farming.

Many a house in Duplin now totters to dilapidated ruin where a few years ago children played and there were busy families. These have gone to live in towns or in other cities or states.

What is happening in Duplin is happening in most strictly rural sections of Eastern North Carolina. Duplin's new government or ganization to attract and develop industry is an effort to keep the folks at home and to give them jobs and opportunities. The leaders have pointed specifically to hopes they can make new opportunities right at home for their young people.

Duplin within less than a month after the voters approved the idea had organized its new commission, roughed out policy and had begun a search for a competent manager.

Duplin County was one of the first counties completely to reorganize and consolidate its schools in a new move for quality education. The change saw four high schools replace twice or more than that number. The parents themselves petitioned for the consolidations. There was none of the opposition which so often marks school advances and changes in many counties. Duplin's record was so outstanding for its schools that it was often cited as the new advance for larger high schools with improved faculty, curriculum and better trained teachers spread over the state.

Maybe in the new industrial venture we shall have another "Duplin County Story."

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

They was a little excitement at the country store Saturday night. Ed Doolittle come in and announced he had wrote to the Post Office Department a couple of weeks ago and has now got his new Zip number. Ed is a little sneaky in matters of this kind, Mister Editor, always trying to git ahead of his neighbor. I can recollect during the last World War when he finagled around and come up with the first gas ration card in the community.

Ed was busting with pride Saturday night, said he aimed to paint his Zip number, his Social Security number, his Internal Revenue number, his telephone number, and his Army serial number in World War I on a piece of cardboard, frame it and set it on the mantelpiece in the parlor. Ed allowed as how, now that he was running this country by the numbers, his mantelpiece decoration would give his status in the community and also come in handy for quick reference. And in case his house might burn down, Ed said he was going to jot down the numbers on his shirt tail for emergency use. He claimed that next to a nuclear attack, he couldn't figger nothing nowadays worse than getting caught 10 mile from home without your numbers.

Zeke Grubb reported he had saw in the papers where Senator Talmadge of Georgia was trying to git a bill passed to clean up elections in the big cities like New York and Chicago. Some of our rural Congressmen was claiming it had got to the place in the big cities where it didn't make no difference how the people voted, the politicians style it the way they wanted it to go. Personally, Mister Editor, I don't think human nature in these matters is any worse or any better than they was 50 years ago. I recollect once when I was a young man they had to call off a election a week before it was scheduled on account of somebody had broke in the Court-house and stole the results.

Incidental, Zeke is a authority on affairs at the national level, and he announced President Kennedy has hit a brick wall with his social medicine program for the aged. Zeke advised us old folks to avoid needing to git in the hospital afore the next general election in 1964. But Ed told Zeke he needn't be counting on this item in 1964. On account of Ed being a Abe Lincoln Republican, he is supporting Rockefeller or Goldwater for 1964 and he said he ain't saw where either one of them has come out fer social medicine.

Isaac Cornfodder, that is our authority on matters at the international level, reported he had saw where Castro was having all burglars in Cuba shot. What was puzzling all the fellers was where Castro ever learned it was wrong to steal.

Yours truly,
Uncle Pete

This Is The Law

CREDIT CARDS
Credit cards are being extensively used and there is slowly beginning a body of law controlling their usage.

The 1961 General Assembly of North Carolina passed a statute making it a criminal offense for any person to knowingly obtain or attempt to obtain credit, goods, or services under a false, fictitious, or counterfeit credit card or other credit device.

The statute is also made applicable to one who uses or attempts to use a valid credit card or credit device of another without the authority of the person to whom it was issued.

It is furthermore, a crime for a person to use his credit card or credit device after he has received a notice that it has been revoked, take care of having any checks already on their way delivered to you.

There are two broad systems whereby the credit card system operates; the two party system and the three-party system.

Under the two-party system the store issues a credit card (commonly called a "charge-a-plate") to its credit customers. This card may be used only at the issuer's establishment and the issuer bills the user directly. This, the issuer and creditor are the same party.

In the three-party system the holder of the credit card is able to obtain ready credit at numerous places throughout the world. The establishment furnishing the goods is paid by the credit card company, who in turn sends an itemized bill to the person to whom the credit card has been issued. If the user of the credit card does not pay his bill within a certain length of time, the claim is turned over to a collection agency and the credit card is revoked.

The credit card company customarily charges the establishment furnishing the goods or services a commission for its services.

The establishments are notified by the credit card company not to honor the credit card if there has been a revocation.

The user of a three-party card appears to have a two-fold liability through the use of the card: (1) at the time of a purchase he becomes indebted to the establishment which has given him goods and services on credit and (2) he has a continuing contractual duty to the credit card company to pay the bill.

The business establishment usually looks first to the credit card company for the payment of the debt. But if the credit card company should for any reason fail to pay, the establishment may still go against the user.

The user of a credit card cannot hold the issuer liable if a business establishment refuses to honor the card.

BIBLE FACTS OF INTEREST

BY: Ella V. Pridgen "The Cross Means Life"

(Read Mark: 13) Christ's sacrifice was sufficient for the whole creation. God sent his Son into the world to redeem the whole world, for all men who stand in need of salvation.

Jesus and his disciples had been in the upper room. The upper room was the anteroom to Gethsemane, it was preparation for the agony-prayer in the garden. The sacrament for the Lords' Supper had been celebrated and explained - Gethsemane-cross.

Why? The Cross was a plan in the mind of God planned for our redemption. We must get these points buried deep in our minds. Meaning of the cross. First it is the supreme example of the identification of God with man. Man does not go through any valley alone, not the valley of suffering or death. The cross represents Gods complete outreach toward man. God has become what we are in order that we may become what he is. God has broken the power of evil and has declared He is the victor who can give to all those who live by his grace.

In the Cross, man sees the depth of his sin. The Cross brings us face to face with God's gracious love, and man's unbelief. Sin is a violation of love. The question the Book of Mark asks is: "What shall we do to be saved?"

Don't Starve Your Beautiful Shade Trees

Each of us has, in some form or another, a beautiful shade tree. The summer months are the best time to fertilize them. The cause of trouble is starvation, according to University of Tennessee Extension Forester, John Sharp, says the National Plant Food Institute's Southern Regional Office.

The elements needed in the greatest quantities for healthy tree growth are nitrogen, phosphate and potash. They are deficient in most soils where shade trees are grown; deficiencies result in poor bud development, unhealthy color, drooping branches and poor growth in general.

A balanced fertilizer, such as 10-10-10 or 12-12-12 is recommended for shade trees. From one to one and one half pounds of fertilizer for each inch of tree diameter is sufficient. The fertilizer may be applied through a series of holes made over the root system from the trunk out to the "drip line", or as far as the branches extend. The holes should be 12-18 inches deep and one foot apart for small trees and three feet for larger trees. The opinion of some forestry experts, that digging holes to fertilize trees is unwarranted. Instead, fertilizers are simply spread on the surface of the ground to be carried downward by water. Since most of the tree's small feeder roots are just under the soil surface, intertwined with grass roots, surface-applied plant nutrients readily leach into the soil and are quickly absorbed. Because roots extend well beyond the crown, or drip line - often exceeding fifty feet for young pole-size trees - fertilizers should be spread beyond the span of the tree crown when using this method.

Most people will find it more convenient to fertilize their lawns and trees at the same time, using the broadcast method. When this is done, be sure and spread extra fertilizer under the trees over and above that required by the grass. This, reminds the Institute, will help assure not only beautiful shade trees, but a beautiful lawn as well.

The God Who Acts

Lesson for July 7, 1963

Bible Material: Genesis 1 and 2. Devotional Reading: Psalm 23:1-2.

BELIEVING there is a God is necessary to religion, but just believing that God exists doesn't make a person a religious being. There is a school doesn't make one educated; believing there is a hospital somewhere will not help a sick person; believing that women exist does not make a marriage. So believing that God exists doesn't make religion, it is only the bare start of it.

That God is, is important; what He is, is more important; but the Christian religion, and the Jewish before us, believe that we haven't got to the heart of the matter till we have asked, What does God do? The God of the Bible is not a serene infinite Contemplator, lost in his own great thoughts, viewing human affairs with indifference, as an emperor might look at an anthill. The God we worship is a God who acts. He is a God whose actions, so far as they are concerned with us, have been revealed to us through the Bible. At the beginning of the Ten Commandments God is identified, not by describing what He is like, but by recalling what He has done.

Why God acts
The very first mention of God in the Bible, in the very first sentence, tells of something God did: He "created the heavens and the earth." We must not fancy that God had been spending eternity in idleness and that now for the first time He was stirred up to action. But whatever else God has done, His dealings with men and women began, we may say, when He made the world in which we live. The Christian theologians generally believe that God didn't have to create any world at all, or this one in particular; He was entirely free in creation.

Still, He must have had reasons. He is not a God who does anything "just for the fun of it." We are not to sneer at guess work. We can perhaps not comprehend what God should create anything at all; but we can think of some good reasons why God created this kind of universe. The story in Genesis tells of God's creating a world carefully ordered; a world beginning with light; a world filled with life. It is a fair belief that God acted in this way because He does not approve of disorder, darkness and death.

Where God acts
God doubtless acts in ways and places far beyond our power to follow Him even in thought. But within the range of our line of sight, so to speak, God acts in two realms: the realm of nature and the realm of man. God does not force His way into nature or the life of man. He belongs in both because He created both, and He did not shut himself out when He made them. People sometimes make the mistake of ascribing to God only events that are mysterious and terrible. An insurance contract, for example, "act of God" means disaster of some kind. But God is in the world on a sunny summer morning just as much as in a blizzard. It is by an act of God that the sun is bright and the sky is blue; for it is by an act of God that there is a sun and a sky at all. Christians do not believe that God made this world and tossed it - this earth and all the stars there are - out into space to spin in the emptiness as best it can. Rather, God upholds the earth and the heavens, keeps them going, is at work continually.

The growth of a flower is as much of a miracle as could be imagined, only we have grown used to the mighty and amazing acts of God that we can see every day.

How God acts
God also acts in man. We believe that all good comes from him. Wherever we see an unselfish act, wherever we see a selfless devotion, wherever there is sincere repentance for sin, there we see God at work by His Spirit. Whoever abides in love abides in God, one apostle wrote, "for God is love."

But how can the Holy God work in unbelly man? How can the infinite God who is Spirit be at work in this material universe? This we do not know, and God has not revealed to us the how of His actions. If we knew how God acts in the universe and in man especially, we should know as much as God does. To recognize God, to love and to serve Him, it is not necessary first to explain Him.

WASHINGTON REPORT
from
Your Congressman
DAVID N. HENDERSON

In my first speech in 1961 after having sworn in as a member of Congress, I said "this about Civil Rights." I believe that all citizens should have equal rights under the law; that all citizens should have equal educational opportunities; equal treatment in the courts of the land. I added, "SOCIAL acceptance of persons of other races (which I am persuaded is the real goal of the so-called 'Liberals' in this field) is a matter for the individual conscience, and in my humble opinion, so amount of legislation and no judicial decision - state or federal - can ever create friendship and social acceptance between persons who are not willing to accept it."

Two and one half years of Congressional service have not changed my original opinion, and I cannot agree with the President and leading Republicans who are advocating far-reaching new legislation in the field of so-called Civil Rights.

In the second place, while I am the idea of Congress or any other governing body being blackmailed into action by street demonstrations, threats of violence and the flouting of street and local law.

In the second place, while I am sincerely concerned about the so-called "Rights" of minority groups, I am equally concerned about the long-standing and established rights of majority groups and property owners.

Lastly, I return to my original thesis. There may be - as the President said - a moral obligation on all people to live as brothers, but I do not believe it is either proper or Constitutional for the United States Congress to attempt to convert this into a legal obligation.

Changes In Your Social Security
The Social Security Administration is vitally interested in making sure that beneficiaries receive their monthly checks promptly.
So, if you have recently moved or plan to move shortly, notify your Social Security Office immediately of your new address.
Ordinarily, once a beneficiary is on the rolls, monthly social security checks come routinely and promptly. But a change in address that is not reported can temporarily stop payments, with the grave risk that a check may be stolen or misdirected, requiring a time-consuming recovery process. Many beneficiaries neglect to report their new address until their next check is due and express surprise that it has not followed them on their new residence. To avoid this, the Social Security Office should be notified promptly either in person or by mail.
You may report your new address directly to the Social Security Administration by filling out and mailing the post card (Form OAC-668) which is given to you when you begin receiving your checks. Or you may send a short note over your signature to the Social Security Payment Center, giving your name and address, your claim number, your new address, and the date you plan to move. The address of the Payment Center from which your check comes is on your "Certificate of Award."
Of course, the Post Office should also be notified, but the address on the check will not be changed by such a notice. This notice will only take care of having any checks already on their way delivered to you.
So, if you plan to change your address, remember to let the Social Security Administration know just as soon as you are sure.
For further information on this or any phase of the Social Security Program, contact your Social Security District Office at 311 East Walnut Street in Goldsboro. Office hours are 8:45 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., and the telephone number is 734-1491.

Health and Safety Tips

From The American Medical Association

The great American holiday - the July 4th weekend - is almost here again.

For millions of American families it will be a four-day holiday this year. And for almost every family the long holiday weekend will bring at least one family picnic.

The July 4th picnic is as traditional in America as the hot dog - which is a main staple of the picnic lunch. Even the flies and the ants have a big time at picnics.

But now and then picnics end in tragedy - the tragedy of food poisoning. Most foods spoil quickly in hot weather and away from refrigeration. If there are a few staphylococcal bacteria present, they need only a few hours of time and a warm temperature to grow rapidly. Some foods can become poisoned in as little as five or six hours on a hot day.

There are some easy and simple ways to avoid food poisoning on a picnic. One valuable item is a good portable ice box. Chill the foods thoroughly in the refrigerator at home. Use plenty of ice. Make sure the lid is tight. This will keep your perishables fresh.

Take along the sandwich ingredients in the original wrappings and containers and make up your picnic lunch on the spot, just before mealtime. Take the ham in a sealed can and open it at mealtime. The same applies to mayonnaise. Keep the boiled eggs and potatoes separate in the ice box, and mix the potato salad at the last minute.

Stick to canned foods and sealed jars and bottles that can be opened just before serving. Be careful about pies and cream-filled bakery items. They spoil very fast on a hot day. Fresh fruits keep better and will make good desserts.

It's actually not very difficult to insure safe picnic meals. Just follow your home practice of refrigerating those foods that need it. If you make up a hamper of sandwiches, load it into your hot auto trunk, head for the beach, and eat many hours later - well, you're asking for trouble.

As presented to Congress, this year's foreign aid package proposal requests economic assistance "for at least 73 nations and 7 British or Dutch territories or possessions and military assistance to at least 58 nations", according to Representative Passman, Chairman, Foreign Operations Subcommittee on Appropriations.

These grants and loans to other through money for our national security effort. However, time and again, hard-pressed advocates of the programs admit that perhaps the programs ought to be justified more adequately on benefits which will be reaped by American jobholders or American businesses. It is well to ask if these are legitimate reasons to continue a program which is acknowledged to have become a steady drain on our entire Federal financial structure, including our gold reserves, to have resulted in mounting billions of increase in our national debt, and to have lessened the chance every year of balancing the Federal budget.

The tax reduction proposal brings the question once more: "Are we willing to be realistic in the appropriation of funds for foreign aid and a multitude of other programs?" If not, any tax reduction will imperil the financial structure of the nation.

Senator Church pointed out that "apart from the Sino-Soviet bloc, there were only eight countries left in the world which did not receive (some) form of foreign aid from the United States". He made a demand from (some) form of foreign aid failed criticism of aid to "rich NATO countries" who continue to receive military assistance at our expense.

Senator Morse told the Senate: "I do not know of another time in my more important to have a detailed 19 years in the Senate when it was examination of witnesses on a foreign policy bill than in this year of 1963 in connection with this bill."

Congress itself finds it difficult to find the time to analyze the tremendous number of programs being conducted within the structure of the Agency for International Development, the so-called foreign aid agency. Periodically there are measures introduced to investigate the conduct of the program. If this is true of Congress, the American taxpayer faces an equally difficult dilemma in analyzing the foreign aid program which has cost the 1964. There is an enormous endowment more than $10 billion since 1945, and the total which is voted every year is $10-

Congress itself finds it difficult to find the time to analyze the tremendous number of programs being conducted within the structure of the Agency for International Development, the so-called foreign aid agency. Periodically there are measures introduced to investigate the conduct of the program. If this is true of Congress, the American taxpayer faces an equally difficult dilemma in analyzing the foreign aid program which has cost the 1964. There is an enormous endowment more than $10 billion since 1945, and the total which is voted every year is $10-
