

"Horn in the West" Opens June 29 Day Spectacle Begins Celebration

History will be revived in western North Carolina on June 29 as an oxen-drawn wagon carries one of the most colorful spectacles in the expansion of American nation. The Wagon Train coincides with the Carolina Charter Tercentenary Celebration in Boone on June 29 and the opening of "Horn in the West" that evening. The Wagon Train, complete with scouts in buckskins and pack horses, will originate at Ferguson near Daniel Boone's old hunting cabin.

Wagon Master Dewitt Barnett of Boone will head the wagon with the party heads for the first night's camp site at Darby, a distance of 13 miles.

Events at Darby will include a "talent contest" featuring country music and Ralph Smith of the W-7 TV Crackerjacks as master of ceremonies. John Dawson of Darby and Rev. Bill Chapman of Ferguson are in charge of arrangements for the festivities at the camp site. Dawson said that the people of that section are sponsoring a chicken barbecue as part of the entertainment. A cash prize will be awarded in the "talent contest." Dawson declared that the people in Darby are planning to entertain from three to 5,000 people. The barbecue starts at 2:30 p. m.

Scout Ivey Moore of Wilkes County said that for added excitement an Indian attack is expected at the Darby camp site and at Cook's Gap.

Invitation Issued

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilbert Bonham, Jr. request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Sylvia Jane to Mr. James Riley on Sunday the seventh of July Ninteen hundred and sixty-three at four o'clock in the afternoon Rose Hill Baptist Church Rose Hill, North Carolina. Reception immediately following ceremony in Church Social Room. All friends and relatives of the bride and groom invited to attend.

Spencer Miller of Wilcat in Watauga County will drive the lead wagon during the three-day trip over the trail that Daniel Boone followed in crossing the Blue Ridge Mountains in 1783 from Wilkes County to Boone. His wagon will follow the trail that Boone blazed and which later was followed by the famous Wilderness Road into Kentucky. Part of Miller's 18 children will make the trip with him.

Men and women making the trip will dress in pioneer clothing typical of Boone's party. They'll pack such equipment as old-timey cooking utensils, broad axes and Kentucky rifles.

Clyde Greene of Boone, Chairman of the Wagon Train Committee, said that entertainment at Cook's Gap will include an old-timey hymn sing around a big camp fire. Members of the party and guests will be treated to buffalo stew cooked in a huge iron pot.

Before disbanding in Boone on June 29, the Wagon Train will be featured in one of two parades to be held in Boone. This parade has been scheduled for 10 a. m. and the train will go through parts of the town of Boone and to the new William J. Conrad Stadium at Appalachian State Teachers College.

Hot Weather Makes Cow Puff More And Milk Less

A puffing cow is more interested in comfort than in making milk. Tests at the U. S. D. A. and Missouri Experiment Stations showed that comfort for cows in hot weather may be as important as proper feeding for maximum production.

It is not unusual for milk production to drop as much as 20 per cent during hot weather, says Guy S. Parsons, extension dairy specialist at North Carolina State. High humidity, along with temperatures, affect the cows even more than when the humidity is low. Hot weather not only lowers the volume of milk, but it also lowers the percentage of fat and solids-not-fat in the milk.

The initial high temperature for dairy cows is 75-80 degrees, Parsons says. When the temperature goes above this level, feed consumption, body weight and milk yield decline. This is due to the fact that cows have to reduce their roughage intake to provide cooling.

Dairymen are urged not to guess on the weather and providing comfort for cows. If natural shade is not available building a pole-type shelter open on all sides will protect cows from the heat. It should be located where there is good air movement. A simple, inexpensive shelter will do the job and give cows with shade produced 1.35 a return on the investment. Dairy pounds more milk a day per cow than unshaded cows in a University of California test.

Seed treatment destroys organisms on the surface of the seeds, including smut, seed roting diseases, and some of the root rots and blights.

Changes In Your Social Security

About 2 million hired farm workers are now building social security credit toward future benefits for themselves and their families. But, according to the Social Security District Office, many others who should be getting credit toward old age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits, are failing to do so.

A farm worker is covered by social security if he is paid $150 cash wages or more in a year by an employer, or if he works for an employer on 20 or more days on a time, rather than a piece-work basis. In either of these two situations, the employer is required by law to report the worker's earnings and pay the social security tax. These reports are due in January of each year. But right now, in the growing season, the farm employer needs to make sure that he is keeping a record of the people he hires so that he will be in a position to make his report in January.

It is not a "retroactive" system, but the farm employer should make sure that he records the correct names and social security number of each employee, keeping it carefully from the work. If the farm employer has not kept such a record, it is because he did not expect the employer to meet either the $150 or the 20-day test of social security coverage, but it turns out that one or both of these tests will be met. He should begin keeping records for the employee. He can estimate for the record the amount he has already paid the employee in the year.

Farm employers who want more information about how to report their farm employees for social security, should contact the Social Security District Office at 311 East Walnut Street in Goldsboro. Office hours are 9:45 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., and the telephone number is 754-14-61.
