Pack a Picnic, Take to the Woods

What better way is there to relax and forget the heat these sultry weekends than to picnic in a shady glen? With today's wonderful outdoor living equipment, there's no chance of old-fashioned ptomaine. Gone, too, are the days of unexciting, routine fare. Now picnic menus know no bounds. Even antipasto and shrimp marinara can grace your table. The antipasto travels in the tray of the "Thermos" ice chest nestled beside a supply of refreshingly cold soft drinks while the shrimp marinara stays piping hot in a "Thermos" wide mouth vacuum jug, and if your taste runs to iced coffee instead, the picnic jug will keep that at the desired temperature, too.

TOURING VARIETY VACATIONLAND

Few visitors to the Blowing Rock - Linville section of Variety Vacationland or, for that matter, few traveling the Blue Ridge Parkway - fail to include in their list of "musts" a trip to the top of old "Grandfather."

Believed to be the oldest mountain in America, Grandfather Mountain rises to a lofty altitude of nearly 6,000 feet. Authorities say if he had a dollar for each year of his existence he would be a billionaire.

Yes, Grandfather Mountain is an ancient fellow to whom the U. S. Geological Survey attributes rock formations one billion years old - the oldest known rock formations in the world!

This is an unusual claim to fame in itself; however, probably a better known fact is the existence of the Mile High Swinging Bridge atop old Grandfather which provides a lofty passageway and outstanding scenic view from between its two peaks.

The Mile High Swinging Bridge, on the crest of the highest mountain in the Blue Ridge Range, is reached easily along a two and one-half mile scenic roadway wending its way upward from the base of the mountain. The ample parking lot is merely a stone's throw from the footbridge which is suspended over the giant crevice. Here the sight-seer is rewarded with a breathtaking view - a panoramic vista of mountains and foothills over a 100-mile range.

In addition to the lovely scenery, however, the Mountain contains other unusual attractions. Most stop on the way up to examine Split Rock a natural wonder - pointing majestically toward the sky even though apparently nearly dissected by one of nature's mysterious saws at some obscure time in the past. The more adventurous youngsters and oldsters also spend many pleasant hours exploring the labyrinths of the old Black Rock Cliffs Cave.

Here there is more than adequate room for the children to run and enjoy themselves indefinitely. This recreation preserve encompasses a total of 5,000 acres with an abundance of trails, caves and overlooks - all of which the kids feel bear investigating. And there's never a need to hurry along. Those desiring to linger and bask in nature's surrounding can pick their campsite and remain until ready to move on.

An additional inviting feature, for a change of pace, is the Visitor Center, which includes museum exhibit, a gift shop, snack bar and 200-seat assembly hall.

The Old Man is also rich in one other respect. He has tucked away in his mile-high pockets deposits of gold. The U. S. Geological Survey has discovered wealth in four different places on his slopes. Naturally, we cannot guarantee you that you will leave this area with your pockets lined with gold. But be assured that a visit to Grandfather Mountain will provide you with a treasure chest of golden memories that can be drawn upon in years to come.
