PCAs Keep Credit Service Geared To Needs Of Progressive Education

"Production Credit Associations are keeping credit service geared to the changing needs of a progressive agriculture," according to Garland P. King, General Manager of the Duplin Production Credit Association, who has just returned from a one-day meeting of PCA officials held in Goldsboro on August 7, 1963.

The workshop type meeting was conducted by officials of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbia which furnishes leadership, supervision, and loan funds for PCAs in Florida, Georgia, and the two Carolinas.

"To meet the needs of farmers for increased amounts of capital," Mr. King said, "The volume of loans closed by PCAs in the four states has increased from about $142 million in 1957 to more than $253 million in 1962 and the average size of loan has increased during this same period from $3,025 to $5,250."

The intermediate-term loan program of the PCAs for extending credit for capital purposes instituted a few years ago accounts for a substantial portion of the increased volume. The PCA loan survey made last year showed that only 50 per cent of the PCA funds advanced are used for current expenses as compared to 74 per cent in 1956, Mr. King brought out.

The workshop program included discussions on the quality of PCA credit service, getting and using credit information, lender-borrower relationship, and other subjects pointed toward continued improvement of PCA credit service to agriculture.

A Farm visit for inspection and appraisal with a follow-up of reports and discussions was featured during the afternoon of the one-day meeting.

Also attending the meeting were James F. Albertson, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer and Eldon Brock, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer.

The Duplin Production Credit Association makes short and intermediate-term loans to farmers in Duplin County, out of the association office in Kenansville.

nish or "V" grades. The "V" designation will be used only to indicate that lemon, orange, or variegated colored tobacco also carries a greenish tinge. These "LV," "FV," and "KV" grades will require a ripe tobacco with a firm leaf structure.

Another indication of the greater emphasis on maturity and leaf structure is the new slick or "S" grades. Much of the close, tight-faced tobacco which has not matured properly will be placed in these grades, according to the Agricultural Marketing Service.

An "S" grade will be assigned to much of the tobacco which formerly went into the "V" grades and the "LV" grades. Some of the close, tight-faced tobacco which formerly went into the fourth, fifth, and sixth qualities of the 3-letter grades also will be placed in the "S" grade this season.

The Agricultural Marketing Service says the grades for slicks or tight-faced tobacco included in the new standards will provide a more direct and realistic basis for the segregation of these tobaccos.

In addition to the new grade standards, Bradsher says the Agricultural Marketing Service has amended the regulations for inspection of tobacco, with the approval of tobacco growers and the industry.

The amended regulations require warehouse operators in flue-cured market to block off and number the spaces for displaying tobacco for inspection and sale. They also prohibit anyone from interfering with, or attempting to improperly influence, a tobacco inspector while he is grading tobacco on auction floors. Bradsher says, however, the amendment does not prohibit a tobacco producer from discussing the grade of his tobacco with the inspector while it is being graded. All other persons are prohibited from doing so.

An addition to one provision of the regulations was made at the request of several warehouse representatives. This assures that the regulations will not prevent a number of baskets or packages per set of buyers from being sold at any market.
