"Chick" Parrish, Poultry Specialist, Sends Greetings To Poultry Jubilee

The rise of the poultry industry in North Carolina, and it has made a more spectacular rise in the southeastern area of the state and especially in Duplin County than in other areas of the state, with the possible exception of Wilkes, is of tremendous value to the economy.

In 1950 we produced over 28 million broilers and the gross farm income was around $20,699,000. You will recall that along in the fifties tobacco acreage was being curtailed and there was great concern, especially in Duplin, as to how they would replace this anticipated six million or eight million dollar loss in the curtailment of tobacco acreage. Poultry was suggested as one source from which they could increase their gross farm income and it is my understanding that poultry contributed around twelve million to the gross farm income in Duplin County within just a few years.

In North Carolina in 1960 we produced 156,600,000 broilers which were valued at $82,685,000 and in 1962 we produced 203,126,000 which yielded a gross farm income of $98,760,000-making broilers the second largest farm income in North Carolina, being second only to tobacco. The total gross income from poultry and poultry products in 1962 was $191,060,000.

Poultry has exerted a tremendous impact upon our economic life in North Carolina and, in Duplin County think what poultry means to the people of the county. It has brought feed mills to your county, it has supplied employment of several hundred people who did not have jobs before, and the value of the poultry meat is several million dollars annually. So it has furnished increased income, employment, brought new businesses to the county and touches many facets of our society. It has brought about the establishment of extra storage capacity for the small grains, justified the establishment of a poultry disease diagnostic laboratory to better serve the people of the southeastern part of the state. So you can readily see that the poultry industry and especially the broiler industry has had tremendous impact on the economic life of SENCALAND.

These are the things you can readily see. There are other hidden values that have not been mentioned, such as the value of the poultry manure. This has been used in many instances to enrich poor soil to the extent that it will raise grass abundantly and enable farmers to establish beef as an industry on many farms that did not keep cattle before. With new technology and a strong possibility of being able to secure favorable freight rates on the feed ingredients that we need to import should make poultry more attractive. The coming of the poultry industry into Eastern Carolina has made available a market annually for several million dollars of cereal grains.

I want to thank you for the opportunity of supplying this information and wish it were possible for me to visit with you on the 19th but I will be busy with the North Carolina State Fair. I have a rather responsible position with the Fair and, naturally, Saturday being the last day will be one of my busiest days. I wish for you and the people of Southeastern Carolina a very happy occasion. Sincerely, Chick F. Parrish, In Charge Poultry Extension State College, Raleigh, N.C.
