KATHERYN SMITH

October is the time when cascades of brightly colored leaves fall from trees as they mark the transition from summer to fall. It is also the time when our families expect our daily menus to take on a glow comparable to that of the season. Now is the time to brighten up your menus with some of the many foods which are so abundant at this time of the year.

Apples probably head the list of most plentiful fruits during this season, why not take advantage of their abundance by trying one of these delightful recipes taken from the New Basic Cook Book.

STUFFED ROSY APPLES

For each serving allow 1 large, tart apple, 1/3 c boiling water, and 2 T. red cinnamon candies. Dissolve the candies in the water in a shallow saucepan. The apples should stand side by side and the water should come halfway up the apples. Core and pare the apples and place them in the syrup. Cover, cook over low heat only until tender, turning the apples upside down in order to let the colored syrup penetrate the whole fruit. Remove the apples from the syrup, which may be boiled longer if it is not thick enough to pour over the fruit. Serve warm or cold.

If served cold they may be stuffed with sweet pickle or cream cheese and nuts.

APPLE BALLS

Allow 1 large apple, 1/4 c water, 2 T. sugar, 1 tsp. currant jelly, 1 T. chopped nuts, 1/4 tsp. lemon juice for each serving.

Pare the apples and cut into balls with a French Ball cutter (the type you use for melon balls). Place the balls in a deep saucepan in which water, sugar, and lemon juice have been dissolved to form a syrup. Simmer the balls until tender; remove from the syrup with a perforated ladle to a small saucepan in which the jelly has been melted.

Cook the remainder of the apples (skin and all) in the syrup and rub through a strainer. Place the apple sauce in the bottom of individual serving dishes, arrange the balls on top; sprinkle with chopped nuts.

One of the more calamitous stages teenagers must pass through is the period when young skins are subject to a number of disorders, notably acne! Over-productive skin oil glands can cause this condition, as can rapid body changes peculiar to this age which make skin more susceptible to bacteria.

Starches, fatty foods and sweets encourage acne, while a diet high in vitamins is probably beneficial. Important in helping to curb this condition is sufficient rest, proper elimination, reasonable skin care, proper food, outdoor exercise and use of external medication with record of beneficial results.

Let's have a few words now about prescriptions—they can and do cure or relieve any of hundreds of human ailments. Your health requires that they be compounded of the finest quality drugs and that they be accurate. You can count on this at Sam's Drug Store, Rose Hill Phone-289-2440.
