

Boyette said, "I'm sure lots of people, who've been trying to get a chance to answer their Christmas Seal letter, just haven't had a moment to do it. That's what "Mail-It-Day" is for. To all those who haven't yet responded, I want to express the hope that they will set aside the necessary few minutes on that day to do the job. To any who may not have received their Christmas Seals this year earnestly suggest they contact the Tuberculosis Association at Box 68, Warsaw, N.C. phone 293428.

"A great many people whose health and happiness are aided by Christmas Seals, join me in my hope for a fruitful "Mail It Day".

Roadside mailboxes, the first in the United States to offer collection services to highway motorists, are now installed on US 70, US 1, and US 70-401 on the outskirts of Raleigh, North Carolina.

ReflectORIZED blue and white information signs designating the location of the new postal facilities were posted by the Traffic Department of the North Carolina State Highway Commission in cooperation with the United States Postal Service. Daily mail collections at the three sites are operated by the Raleigh Post Office, and will be continued on an experimental basis.

Homeless Children

Greensboro, N.C.—Hope for the homeless child, and the childless home, is the business of the Children's Home Society of North Carolina.

There's no other agency in the state like this adoption and child-caring service, now in its 62nd year. It gives its help without charge, and operates solely on voluntary support.

A mail solicitation during the Christmas season is the traditional manner in which the Society raises money for its work. It also shares, through Carolinas United, in United Fund appeals conducted in participating Tar Heel communities. "This year's solicitation is a vital one," said Miss Harriet L. Tynes, executive director.

"We have helped more children this year than ever before. Naturally, our costs are higher. Only a generous response to our appeal can enable us to meet the increasing demands for services."

Statistics tell part of the Society's story. Last year, 642 babies and children were aided. Of the total, 518 had been placed in adoptive homes and others were waiting for placement. This year, a total of 614 babies and children received aid during the first nine months.

More impressively than figures, the children themselves tell the story of the Society's achievements. For example, there is Ruth, an officer of her class in the junior high school of a Piedmont city. She had withdrawn into a shell when unhappy circumstances sent her to a child-caring institution. Placed in an adoptive home, her naturally buoyant personality soon reasserted itself.

Another example is Robert, who found the love and security he needed with a farm family in the eastern part of the state. His tendency to be a problem child vanished when the opportunity came to work off his energy in farm chores.

While these names are fictitious, the case histories are real. In addition, there are the many childless families who adopt babies each year.

Policy for the Society is set by a board of directors, composed of about 75 prominent North Carolinians from all parts of the state. The current president is William D. Sinder, associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News.

Offices headquarters and a nursery are maintained at 740 Chestnut Street in Greensboro. There are also field offices in Charlotte, Greenville, Asheville, Wilmington and Chapel Hill. Persons interested in adoption, or help for a child, may contact either the headquarters or a field office. Contributions, which are tax deductible, may be mailed directly to the Greensboro address.

"Mail It Day" For Christmas Seal Drive

"No time like the present--and no present like good health". That's the theme song for Friday December 13th, designated by the Duplin County Tuberculosis Association as "Mail It Day" --the day for all good citizens and true to catch up with the mail and respond to their Christmas Seal Letter.

Dr. E. L. Boyette, president of the Association, pointed out that Christmas Seal Contributions are the sole support of the organization, whose continuing effectiveness in fighting TB and other Respiratory Diseases will depend on the degree of the public response. The funds are used for health education, free x-rays, tuberculin testing services, activities in connection with respiratory diseases and medical education.

"Of course during the Christmas season everybody's swamped with slips to do," Dr.
