Education: On The Move In Duplin

The General Assembly of North Carolina, after two years of intensive investigation and study, found that a program for the education of the exceptionally talented school children in the public school system of North Carolina would be strong in public interest and long overdue.

The Legislature has made certain basic recommendations for the establishment of statewide programs for the exceptionally talented children. The establishment of such a program is essential in order that North Carolina in this time of local and national challenge and crisis.

A fund was appropriated by the General Assembly for the allotment of special teachers to teach these exceptionally talented children.

At the request of Mr. O.P. Johnson Superintendent of Duplin County Schools, Duplin County was allotted four of the special teachers for the 1963-1964 school year. As a result of this allotment four Enrichment Classes were established according to the criteria set up by the General Assembly and the State Board of Education.

The two white classes are located in the Warsaw Elementary School, fifth grade, Miss Thelma Swinson, teacher, and Rose Hill Elementary School, fifth grade, Mrs. Mary Ruth Fussell, teacher. The two negro classes are located in the Douglass School, fifth and sixth grade combination, Mrs. Naomi Davis, teacher, and E.R. Smith, fifth and sixth grade combination, Mrs. Addie P. Hodges teacher.

These students are engaged in activities that will enrich the curriculum through unit work and correlation of subjects. These activities require a wide range of reading, reporting and self-expression; talking with professional people; and creative work through writing, music and art.

Our objectives for these en-

- richment classes are:
1. To challenge the full use of each child's abilities.
  2. To broaden the base of his knowledge.
  3. To deepen his understanding.
  4. To increase the level of skills.
  5. To develop in each a love of learning.

Pork Is Plentiful For Winter Dishes

Pork—a popular meat with budget minded shoppers—is a good choice for January menus. Generous supplies of pork are available because of heavy hog marketing.

Besides its popularity for taste appeal, pork is a valuable source of high quality protein, and is also an important source of thiamine, iron, and niacin.

7. Encourage initiative in each child.
8. Give him a chance to develop creatively.

The pictures show the four classes engaged in the different activities that will enrich their program, challenge their abilities, broaden and deepen their understanding, and above all develop a love for learning. It is the hope of all concerned with this program that this is only the beginning and that more teachers will be made available to work with this long neglected group of children.

riculture indicates that a favorite pork product that is hard to beat is pork sausage. They offer this recipe for sausage egg-scramble—a good brunch or midnight snack item: For 6 to 8 servings, brown 1 lb. bulk sausage in a fry pan, drain off excess fat, and cook over low heat until thoroughly done. Beat 12 eggs until light, adding 1 teaspoon salt. Pour egg mixture over sausage and cook slowly, stirring frequently until eggs are set. Serve hot.

For a sausage-egg sandwich place hot buttered toast on a serving dish, top with the cooked sausage-egg mixture, and garnish with a spoonful of grape jelly.

The family will also enjoy sausage, 'kraut and potatoes. To make drain a can of whole potatoes and place in cooking vessel. Add a can of sauerkraut, a teaspoon of caraway seed, and a pound of tiny sausage links. Cover pan tightly and cook over medium heat for about 15 minutes, or until the sausages are bubbling hot. Serve with horseradish, mustard and dark rye bread.

manent marks on the skin. There are other potential complications from the disease that can be diagnosed only by your doctor.

Adults occasionally get the chickenpox, and usually are sicker than the child patients.

Chickenpox is a common childhood disease, for the most part and not very serious. But it can lead to more serious conditions, and thus it's important to call your physician promptly if someone in your household gets the disease.

Chickenpox

Chickenpox is something that nearly all children catch at an early age, get over in two or three weeks of itchy rash, and never have again because the first case usually causes immunity.

Chickenpox usually is not a serious disease and most children recover readily with no after effects. Sometimes, however, it's not quite so simple.

The disease is caused by a virus. It usually is transmitted by close personal contact with someone already infected. Symptoms are well known to most mothers—a slight rise in temperature, loss of appetite, headache and backache. The most obvious symptom is a rash of red spots and small blisters over much of the body.

Chickenpox usually requires little special treatment. Even in cases which seem to be mild, however, it's important to call in a physician to make the diagnosis and to look for possible complications. The doctor usually advises the patient to be kept in bed while the rash and fever continue. He also advises isolating the patient from other children who have not had the disease.

The doctor also can recommend soothing lotions or medications to relieve the itching of the eruptions. A frequent complication of chickenpox is infection of the red spots by scratching which leaves per-
