It was planned by the W. M. S. social chairman, Mrs. Alvin Powell, and assisted by the circles social chairman, with the Evelyn Everett Circle having charge of party cookies, the Alice Swinson Circle, party sandwiches and nuts and the Alice Hunter circle punch. Mrs. Betty Mae Tucker poured punch.

The table was covered with a yellow lace cloth, centered with an arrangement of mixed yellow flowers, and yellow tapers.

The receiving line was made up of the president Mrs. Lindon Sutherland; vice president, Mrs. J. E. Tucker; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. L. E. Pope and the honoree Mrs. M. A. Conrad.

Mrs. Conrad was presented a gift, a brass bowl and candle sticks to match.

Mrs. Paul Bass had charge of the register.

When a man finds no peace within himself, it is useless to seek it elsewhere.

So live that you help to answer the world's problems — not add to them.

If you are sensible, you will not fear the day you've never seen.

They shared a dream for all America

America was beginning to shake off the despair of the Great Depression. Across the nation men were going back to work, and the machines of industry were starting to hum again.
But out in rural areas, life showed little change. Rural Americans were cut off from the nation's quickening pulse by the absence of electric power. Poverty and hardship were a way of life. But Senator George Norris of Nebraska and Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas had a dream. And because they were fighters as well as dreamers, they lived to see their dream take shape.
Norris and Rayburn co-authored the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, when only 10 per cent of the nation's farms had electricity . . . and the rest is history. Today more than 97 per cent of all the homes in rural America enjoy this convenience which has become a necessity.
The job is far from done, however, as America's rural electric systems, with the help of REA loans, build to meet the continually rising demands for more and more electricity. In only seven years rural Americans will be using twice as much electric power as they do today.
To the end of their lives, Norris and Rayburn loved the program they did so much to start. Rayburn considered rural electrification one of his greatest legislative achievements, and often said so.
From these early dreams of Norris and Rayburn has grown today's great rural electrification program—an American success story and a priceless asset to the entire nation.
