He enumerated evidences that he had seen in Washington which made him know that the Democratic Party is the party of the people.

The Congressman admonished those to cite from now until the November elections not only the accomplishments of the Kennedy Administration but the accomplishments of the Johnson Administration. He mentioned the sound economy which has already been reflected in an income tax cut without the reduction of any essentials.

He reminded the Democrats that big city congressmen helped us hold to our agricultural controls, and that the recent cotton and wheat legislation was enacted with only ten Republican votes which showed that the Democrats from every section of our country gave united support to this legislation.

Henderson pointed to President Johnson's keen and sincere interest in every family and every group in our country, and his main purpose is to serve every person.

As to foreign affairs, the Congressman said that when President Johnson took office he was the best prepared of any president ever to assume the high office. President Kennedy had not been briefed by the Republicans as to all situations regarding our foreign policy and he was at somewhat a disadvantage, but Johnson has been sitting in at these meetings for years.

The Congressman predicted that the Democrats will receive the greatest vote ever recorded and that they should be reminded that this entails great responsibility.

Superintendent O. P. Johnson remarked to the group that Truman is rapidly becoming in the eyes of historians
