ed by the guests of honors' seats. A basket of gladioli hung from the Formosa trees added more color to the setting.

The girls, dressed in mums and Sarongs, and their escorts, clad in gaily-colored shirts and bermudas and beachcomber hats were greeted by Miss Janice Newton who presented each guest with a multicolored lei and a Hawaiian greeting of 'Aloha! The girls were also given a flower for their hair. Miss Carr and Miss Fussell were given leis of soft pink gladioli to wear for the evening.

As the guests entered, they were also extended a happy welcome in the traditional manner by an exotic lovebird. While the couples found their places on the matted straw, they were served chicken salad and spicy dips and chips.

The guests of honor, directed to their seats at the head of the table, looked out on guests who encircled a huge table that was covered in magnolia leaves topped with a fishing net decorated with seashells. The centerpiece of the table, a giant wooden bowl heaped with fruit and vegetables added to the table decor.

Shrimp cocktail served on individual scalloped seashells provided the first course of the meal. Amid Hawaiian background music to set a relaxed island mood, Billy Saunders proposed the toast 'Lea' Lea Kakou' which means to happiness. To carry out this ancient Polynesian custom the guests were served sparkling Honolulu punch.

After this ceremony all the couples gathered around the charcoal pit to roast their shish-kabobs. Potato Oahu, Hawaiian salad, Hauoli corn, and buttered long loaf bread were added to the menu. A beverage was served from a wooden tub to complete the delicious main course.

With the romantic flickering of tall candles and hurricane lamps, Billy Saunders then entertained the group by singing popular folk songs and playing the guitar.

Valeria King, Ann English, and Tanya Johnson served the guests a fruit dessert scooped from a jagged watermelon shell.

After the completion of the meal, the honored couples were presented a place setting in their chosen pattern.

The guest list included: Jimmy Bowden, Buddy Cottle, Bill English, Steve Cowan, Nita Jean Cowan, Ann Hanchey, Craig King, Geneva Newton, Birch Norman, Joyce Norman, Billy Saunders, Sonny Shelton, and Sue Lynn Teachey.

Your family will approve this tangy, just-right cranberry relish. Combine 1 can (1 pound) Whole Berry Cranberry Sauce, 1/4 cup drained sweet pickle relish and 1 tablespoon prepared white horseradish; blend well. Excellent with deep fried, broiled or baked fish. It can be whipped-up in seconds.

Mrs. Thurston W. Arnold Named Rose Hill Club Woman of Year

Mrs. Thurston W. Arnold, Rose Hill Club Woman of the Year, receives the President's Cup.

In the Rose Hill Woman's Club, the President's Cup is presented each year to a woman who has been outstanding in her service to the club. The Club Women eagerly await each year the announcement by the president of the Club Woman of the Year.

In the Woman's Club meeting on June 24, Mrs. C. F. Hawes, the president, remarked, "I want to tell you about a woman whom I have learned to 'lean on' this year and whose support is never lacking in any phase of the work of our club. Her interest in club work in general was shown by attendance at District Meeting and at District workshop, and by her regular attendance at club meetings and called planning meetings."

"She has demonstrated her willingness to accept responsibility for programs, as well as being one of the officers of our club. When called on for extra assistance at the library - she is there. She goes further than helping only when called upon - she offered greatly needed assistance in that big task of preparing our yearly club report.

"This week she was visiting her mother in Wake County. I sent her word last night that we needed her here today, at this meeting, for some club business. Her devotion to the club and its work and her willingness to sacrifice for it are shown in her making this trip today, and now I will tell her what that 'Important Business' is - to present her this award and recognition!

"Not only is Melba a good Club Woman, but she is active in her church, where she is a Sunday School teacher. All these things - on top of being the very busy mother of three very busy small children!

"It gives me very much pleasure to present this cup to Mrs. Thurston Wade Arnold and to congratulate our club on its good fortune in having such a member."

With surprise Mrs. Arnold stepped forward and accepted the President's Cup with thanks.
