The Raeford Turkey Farms, Inc., dedicated its new $36,000 warehouse and cold storage addition to the processing plant in Raeford. This expansion was made possible through a loan from the Area Redevelopment Administration (ARA). It has enabled the plant to double employment, operate on a year-round basis and break into the overseas market.

The cold storage addition contains 9,600 square feet and has a capacity of 2,000,000 pounds. Part of the unit is kept at minus 10 degrees, and part at minus 40 degrees.

According to company vice president Leonard Frahm, the plant was processing about 1,600,000 pounds of turkey weekly and, last week, reached 250,000 pounds in a single day.

Frahm estimated that the plant is now processing 40 to 50 per cent of all turkeys produced in North Carolina - which he said, is one of the fastest growing turkey producing states in the nation.

According to reports, Rose Hill's Poultry Jubilee was a tremendous success and we take this opportunity to congratulate the many people who were responsible. With the continued cooperation of the fine merchants and business leaders, Jaycees, and other groups and individuals, this event should grow into one of the biggest city-wide events held in our State.

Plywood is nearly dimensionally stable: It shrinks or swells only .2 of 1% from complete saturation to oven dry.

There's a special Underlayment grade of plywood for use under resilient tile.

Industrial firms use about two and a half billion feet of plywood a year.

Plywood for house siding comes in more than two dozen surface textures and patterns.

available, is effective against the cold virus. Any treatment must be directed toward relief of the symptoms and prevention of complications. The wonder drugs - antibiotics and sulfas - have no effect on viruses. They should be used only under medical supervision for the control of complicating bacterial infections. Bed rest, or at least inactivity in a controlled environment, is helpful. Your doctor may suggest mild medication to help allay the discomfort.

Those who have repeated colds should investigate the possibility of allergies being mistaken for colds. Current cold vaccines are of little value, since so many viruses cause colds and effective vaccines have been developed for so few of the viruses producing cold symptoms.

Solid evidence is lacking to demonstrate that "natural" foods, taking vitamin supplements, special types of clothing, forced exposure to sunlight and fresh air have any effect on susceptibility to colds.

Colds are spread by intimate personal contact. A person with a cold should practice good contagion preventing techniques. Coughs and sneezes should be covered. Frequent hand washing is helpful. The victim of a cold should have his own drinking glass, towels and other personal items. Above all, he should stay away from other people.

So far medical science has not been able to break through the guard of Old King Cold. All that can be hoped for is symptomatic treatment to make one feel better until the cold goes away and as much care as possible to prevent spread to others.

Health and Safety Tips

From The American Medical Association

OLD KING COLD IS A KING-SIZED TROUBLEMAKER

The American Medical Association's new pamphlet on the common cold reports that Old King Cold costs the United States $5 billion annually in lost wages, lost production and medical expenses. More than 150 million days per year are lost from our work force. More than 20 million people suffer from colds on any given wintry day. The common cold is the most costly ailment in our country as well as in most other countries.

The common cold is defined as an acute upper respiratory tract inflammation that ordinarily is communicable and is caused by viruses. But this definition has little meaning since the popular use of the word "cold" includes everything from a minor snifle and a nasal obstruction to a disabling illness similar to influenza.

A number of viruses produce the symptoms we call a cold, possibly as many as a hundred. The true cold is an infection with one or more viruses.

Current research seems to indicate that colds are harder to catch than has been thought. In controlled studies, close contact for several hours was necessary before cross infection occurred. Fresh colds appear to be more contagious than older ones, and children's colds have been shown to be more contagious than those of adults. Even apparently well persons may harbor cold viruses and may infect others.

Low temperatures and inclement weather, in themselves, probably have little to do with precipitating colds. Dampness and chill have been suspected of causing colds, but experimental evidence now indicates that they are probably only triggering factors. The relative humidity of the air may be important, however.

There is a sharp rise in incidence of colds at the time the winter heating season begins. The lowered humidity in heated rooms causes the dry nose and throat which contributes to susceptibility to infection. The nose, throat and lungs work better when the air that is breathed has a relative humidity of about 45 per cent. Dry mucous membranes cannot clean themselves by action of their cilia, the hairlike structures that move mucus upward out of the respiratory tract. As a result they become more vulnerable to invasion by cold viruses.
