Home Federal Savings To Open Jacksonville Office

Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Kinston will expand its services in Jacksonville and Onslow County by opening an office in the City of Jacksonville. J. V. Brittle, President, announced that Home Federal Savings has just been granted permission by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of Washington, D. C., to establish a Branch Office in Jacksonville, N. C.

Brittle stated further that the office in Jacksonville will provide the people in Jacksonville and Onslow County the same savings and loan facilities that the home office provides. He expressed the pleasure of the Board of Directors and Officers of Home Federal Savings in being able to make this announcement. This expansion has been planned for quite some time. The application was filed for permission to establish the office with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D. C. on November 1, 1963. A hearing was held on the application in Washington, D. C. on April 11, 1964.

Brittle stated that a local office of the Association in Jacksonville will give expanded services to the residents of Jacksonville and Onslow County in their savings and home financing needs. It will also provide better and faster service for its present customers in the area. The opening will be rushed just as fast as possible, with the opening date to be announced later.

He started further that Home Federal Savings is looking forward to being a part of the Jacksonville community. Home Federal Savings presently has offices in Snow Hill and Warsaw, in addition to its home office in Kinston. The Association has just celebrated its 40th Anniversary, being founded in 1924. Its total resources today are over $24 million.

GARDEN TIME

Homeowners will soon be able to buy potted azaleas in bloom any time of the year, U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists say.

These popular shrubs, which normally flower in the spring, have been induced to flower out of season by special treatments developed by horticulturists of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. A few treated azaleas have already reached the public.

The treatments are of two types: Chemical growth retardants are applied as leaf spray; and the duration of light the plants receive in each 24-hour period is reduced during part of their development. These treatments apply only to greenhouse azaleas, and both are usually necessary for best results.

Preliminary greenhouse experiments have been so successful that this year a series of trials is being conducted in the 39 states where azaleas are grown to learn whether the treatments are practical for all parts of the country. The trials are designed to have azaleas in bloom by December in each test area. Previously, a selection of azaleas for Christmas would have been impossible except under very unusual circumstances.

Data from these trials are expected to be helpful in registering the growth retardants B-995 and CCC for wider use as agricultural chemicals. At present B-995 is registered for chrysanthemums and CCC for poinsettias. Still another compound, phosfon, is already registered for use in retarding chrysanthemum development.

Used on azaleas, the retardant-light treatments suppress shoot growth, causing the plants to be short and compact, stimulate earlier development of buds and more of them. The retardants cause plant foliage to be a darker green.

Flowering plants may be produced in five to six months, ARS scientists say. About two months are needed in the greenhouse, following spray treatment. During the second month of this period, the potted plants should be shaded with black cloth from 4 PM to 8 AM to provide an 8-hour (short day) light period. Then plants should be put in cold storage (50 degrees F.) for two months to break dormancy. When returned to the greenhouse, they flower in four to six weeks.

Varieties already tested and found responsive by Dr. Neil W. Stuart and his co-workers in ARS include Gloria, Mrs. L. C. Fischer, Snow, Sunset, Hinodegirl, Easter Parade, Red Wing, Coral Bells, Hexe, and Alaska. Some varieties, like Chimes, will develop buds even without the chemical treatment. A few varieties are more difficult to retard with chemicals than the majority of those tested, Dr. Stuart says.

ITEM: To prevent lingering food odors in the vacuum bottles which children take to school, fill the bottle with hot suds to soak its interior until dishwashing time.

ITEM: Paint styling is as easy as applying make-up and works the same wonders. Light paint reflects more light, making things seem larger and farther away than they really are. Dark colors absorb light and make things look smaller, closer than they really are.
