One popular holiday cookbook gives us, recipe ideas for ringing in the new year. An early-morning breakfast, a midnight snack, or a festive dinner might welcome in your new year. A large hour glass might be the center of interest. Of course, mountains of balloons filled with confetti add to any gala occasion. Have you toyed with the idea of 12 o'clock placemats? A delightful addition for that midnight surprise.

What to eat? Dips, snacks, cookies, punch, unusual coffees, eggnog, warm cider - just perfect for chilling nights. And to top it all a carnation clock. Here's how to do it: "Red flower stands for midnight, white blossoms mark other hours. Position pottery clock hands. (Or use hands cut from plastic foam.) Place ribboned flower at base. Clock design plates, if available, black cloth, and white napkins are smart props for a midnight party anytime."

Parties without food could never be, so here are a couple of recipes for you.

Crisp Rye Curls - With a very sharp knife or slicer, slice any "icebox" rye loaf paper thin. Place in single layer on baking sheet; heat at 300 tfl crisp and edges curl, about 30 minutes. Dip in hot garlic butter to serve.

Herb Chips - Place large potato chips on baking sheet; sprinkle with margaron, thyme, or basil. Heat in moderate oven (350) 5 minutes.

Hot Pinapple Cider - 1/2 cup mint leaves
2 cups unsweetened spiced apple juice
4 cups cider
1 large bottle ginger ale (not chilled)

Crab apples, fresh or spiced
Crush mint; add cider and pineapple juice. Bring to boil, strain. Bring to a boil, again. Add ginger ale. Serve immediately with crab apples afloat. Makes 12 servings.

Linda G. Smith, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and Becky Page gave the treasurer's report.

A brief account of the recent bowling trip was given by Mr. Coolidge Turner. Plans for caroling with the Kenansville Presbyterian Church were discussed. It was decided the group would assemble at Smith's Chapel at 6:00 P.M. December 21, to go to Kenansville.

The question of whether or not to purchase a secretary's book, a treasurer's record, or a scrapbook at this time, was discussed. The fellowship decided that each of these books should be bought.

A suggestion was made that the fellowship have a Christmas project and soon it was decided that the group would prepare baskets of fruit for a few members of the community. Each member was to bring some fruit next Sunday and the entire group would assemble the baskets right after Sunday School.

A program about the symbols and meaning of Christmas was given by several of the members. The program was ended with a prayer and the meeting was adjourned.

Facal points also add interesting - a bird bath, a summer seat with climbing roses, a garden, or a lake or mountain view from a picture window.

To be useful a plan must meet the needs of the family - a recreation area for children, a picnic area, adequate shade of rest, a vegetable and fruit garden. A rustic setting for entertainment is an asset if space is available.

GARDEN TIME

The home grounds are an integral part of family life. It is here that the family can live and play together and their friends can enjoy the great out-of-doors. The development of plans and arrangements are reflections of individual tastes and family compromises. It lends itself to family projects, nature study, outdoor cookery, hobbies, recreation, fruit and vegetable production an relaxation. How it develops is determined by the occupants and their desires. Whatever the goal, a plan is necessary.

The purpose of the plan is to determine individual preferences, an estimate of costs, establishing properties for immediate needs; essentials that can wait and avoiding costly errors.

Many mistakes are made in the beginning unless due consideration is given to site selection such as drainage, views and exposures. Errors in the selection of suitable plant materials may be disappointing and costly in time and labor. Planting trees too close together, tall growing shrubs under picture windows and poorly located walks and drives. These are just a few of the more common errors.

The objectives of the plan are; attractiveness; convenience; to be useful and interesting. These objectives may overlap as they are accomplished.

Public attractiveness of the home and home grounds is an outward expression of the people who live there. When the residents of a home, or commu-
