ing, preparing, cooking, and the nutritive value of pork to housewives in the state, in addition to this all Home Economist in the state received information kits to help them tell the Pork Story in their classrooms and with consumer groups.

Two of the most widely publicized activities of the Association during the past year consisted of point-of-sale promotions to encourage the use of more pork in outdoor cookery and a joint promotion with the egg and milk people encouraging better breakfast with pork. Mr. Cooper stated that the Pork Producers Association was organized by farmers who felt that Pork Producers needed a representative organization and he urges all producers to get out and vote to continue the many worthwhile activities of this producer, organized, controlled, and financed organization.

Polling places for the April 27 referendum will be announced later.

continues through the summer and is sponsored by Four County Electric Membership Corporation.

John Browning, Member and Community Service Director of the Membership Corporation, said the Leadership Training series is a part of Four County's program to help our communities develop leaders skilled in bringing progress and growth to our area.

"We feel that to bring growth and progress to the area," Mr. Browning said, "we must first train qualified and interested active people in the leadership skills."

The participants in the series were selected by panels of citizens in Pender and Duplin Counties and include both members and non-members of Four County Electric.

The top management consultant firm of Nelson, Nicol and Stokes of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, were contracted to furnish the curriculum and nationally known instructors for the series.

A similar series is planned next year in Bladen and Sampson Counties.
