Answer To Over-Crowded Schools

Duplin County has purchased with ESEA funds, twenty one of these mobile units to provide needed class room space in schools overcrowded by population explosion, population shift, or consolidation of school. They may be transferred where increased enrollment requires more space, at a nominal cost. (Photo by Ruth Wells)

Warsaw Elementary School has received four of these units, the highest number allocated to any one place. This is to alleviate the crowded condition caused by transferring the Faison Elementary School to Calypso.

Duplin County has twenty one mobile class room units, in use or just about ready for use. These units are fully equipped for class room use and represent a total investment of $130,000.00 paid by ESEA funds. Each unit contains heat as well as air-conditioning.

Permanent type structures have been used in the past, thus eliminating the possibility of serving a different location according to population enrollment.

Warsaw Elementary School with an increased enrollment this year, has two mobile units. Increased enrollment is not the only reason a school gets a unit. C. W. Dobbins School in Wallace is getting two of the units to house a class that has been taught on the stage in the auditorium, and a class that was taught back stage. Where ever a need for additional class room space exists in Duplin County, ESEA has provided a mobile unit.

Calypso Elementary School has received four of these units, the highest number allocated to any one place. This is to alleviate the crowded condition caused by transferring the Faison Elementary School to Calypso.

Location of the units and the number obtained are:

P. W. Moore, Faison, 2; Branch, Albertson, 1; Douglas, Warsaw, 1; Teachey, Teachey, 2; P. E. Williams, Magnolia, 1; C. W. Dobbins, Wallace, 2; E. E. Smith, Kenansville, 2; Rose Hill #1, Rose Hill, 2; Warsaw Elementary, Warsaw, 2; James Kenan, Warsaw, 1; Charity, Rose Hill, 1; Calypso Elementary, Calypso, 4.

Board Vacancy Filled

Mr. David John Kilpatrick of Kenansville was appointed to the Board of Trustees of Duplin General Hospital to fill the unexpired term of Joseph E. Quinn who resigned.

Hyatt added that the Extension Service is also attempting to locate farmers who have feed to sell and to identify these sources to those in need of this feed.

"We believe we can avoid any serious general effects from this feed situation," Dr. Hyatt remarked. "But it will require that farmers make decisions a little more carefully, that they improve management programs and get the maximum benefits from the feed they have."

Feed Shortage Poses Threat To N. C. Livestock Industry

The summer drought that parched North Carolina cropland has passed, but its effects will linger on through the winter and into next spring. Strongest effects will be felt by livestock, milk and poultry producers in the form of hay and grain shortages and increased feed costs.

"The feed situation poses a definite threat to our expanding animal industry," explains Dr. George Hyatt, Jr., director of the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University.

"But there are measures available to farmers that should help offset some of the effects of the situation," Dr. Hyatt added.

He said the Extension Service had launched an emergency feeding program designed to provide the farmers "with the best information we have for keeping our animal industry on the same expanding course it has followed in the last few years."

Area meetings for county extension agents have been completed. These sessions involved agents from the 51 counties of northern and central North Carolina where the drought was most severe.

"We have attempted to provide our county agents with the information they can use in assisting farmers in this emergency situation," the extension director commented.

Suggestions are being made to help the farmer realize the maximum benefits from the feed he has available to him. Other alternatives being emphasized include the expansion of fall and winter forage production, culling low performance animals, utilization of low quality roughs and field gleanings, and a general "tightening up" of management practices.

Dr. Hyatt added that the Extension Service is also attempting to locate farmers who have feed to sell and to identify these sources to those in need of this feed.

Boy Scout Kick-Off Drive Begins Sept. 26

By: Larry Kingsley

A truly dynamic force for good has been present for many years in Duplin County, that is the program of the Boy Scouts of America. The need for teaching leadership, citizenship, self-reliance, scouting skills, and building character was seen many years ago by the leaders of the Duplin communities. A continuous scout program has been the results of these community leaders.

There has been talk that the Boy Scout program is out dated and should be completely revised. If teaching and learning such things as the use of a compass, swimming, camping, hiking, or serving as a patrol leader, senior patrol leader, or and law, the pledge of allegiance to the American flag or the out door code, then the boy scout program is obsolete. We in the Boy Scout movement do not believe that "God is Dead" and furthermore, profess our faith in God by our actions and deeds.

The Boy Scout program here in Duplin County has been continually expanding to meet our breakthrough for youth commitments, that of providing an opportunity for ever boy of scouting age to become a scout. We intend to make this commitment a reality in the lives of the boys in Duplin County.

Numbers alone do not tell the story of any organization, but observing the results do. We feel every person can see the results of this program here in the county.

We presently have 1016 boys actively registered in the 48 Cub Scout Packs, Boy Scout Troops and Explorer Post in the County, or nearly 25% of the available boys. This year, as in previous years the Tuscarora Council is asking for financial support of the program. The funds needed to provide the council with professional assistance and facilities come in entirely from communities with in the four county area (Duplin, Johnston, Sampson and Wayne counties). The council, serving 4500 boys, has a budget of $63,636.10 of which Duplin leaders have accepted $9,600.00 as their portion. The kick off date for the county is Sept. 26th with some communities kicking off prior to this date.

We believe in the Boy Scout program and its principles of citizenship training, character building and personal fitness and further that to invest in this program you will be saying "I believe in the youth of today" and with proper training they will carry out our labors and dreams of tomorrow. You may be asked to invest in this program with both time and financially, we ask your understanding and support to the many leaders involved with building men. We feel it is better to build men rather than mend men.

Pulpwood Truck Overturns

A major catastrophe was averted Thursday afternoon in Warsaw when the driver of an asphalt truck applied his brakes to avoid hitting a group of boys on bicycles. A second truck loaded with pulpwood, took to the ditch and overturned, in order to miss the children and the first truck. The children were unharmed.

The asphalt truck owned by Builders Supply of Goldsboro, was headed North on Memorial Drive Extension, escaped damages. The pulpwood truck, owned by W. H. Hall & Son of Rose Hill, plowed up a portion of Mrs. Joyce Matthew's lawn, turned over on its side and scattered the load of pulpwood. The extent of damages to the truck was not learned.
