on "Law and Order" at the February 15 meeting of the Wasaw Rotary Club. In her presentation, Mrs. Wells traced the evolution of laws, trials and the application of the application of punishment for law violations over thecenturies. In her opening remarks Mrs. Wells said that when two or more people come together rule of law and order becames not only a convenience but a necessity. As a mean of mo-dernizing the legal machinery for administering equal justice in the courts from top to bottom, Mrs. Wells said that the legal profession advanced sug-gested changes in the court sy-stem in North Carolina that was implemented with a legislative act that was approved by a referendum of the voters. She said that Duplin County would come under the new system in December of this year.

Mrs. Wells said that if the courts and law enforcement officers live up to their responsibilities, if the governing bo-dies of the state and munici-palities live up to their re-sponsibilities and if the people do likewise, we can absorb and transcend the problems before us and come out better men and women. In her closing remarks Mrs. Wells stated that where law ends, tyranny begins and that everyone should share in our community to uphold law and order. We must regulate our conduct so as to promote the good of all - remembering that we set examples for others. She also state d that the gift

For one thing, the "stretch" dresses or skirts no longer

"ride up" as they used to. Improvements make the fabrics "give" as we move about, Therefore, garments made of stretch fabrics are excellent for chidren's wear, sportswear and dress wear.

Early fabrics for ski pants and other sportswear, were designed to fit tight and then to stretch from 30 to 50 per cent for extreme body action, Mrs. Miller says. They were made with an up-and-down stretch facility. Today's stretch fabrics provide "comfort" stretch which is horizontal and the provide "give" is about 25 to 30 per cent. The new stretch garments look much like ordinary garments. It's the wearing that shows up the difference, Mrs. Miller observes.

LOANS ARE STILL AVAILABLE on corn and soy beans. Anyone interested in a loan on their stored grains should contact their ASCS county office. To be eligible for a loan on corn, you must be eligible for price support. Now is the time to make plans for the farm storage facility and price support programs. Producers should be making plans for storage facilities for their small grains and also for corn and soybeans later in the year, it is not too early to make plans and erect storage facilities. The farmers of Duplin County took advantage of the Storage Structure, Drying Equipment and Commodity Loans which are administered by ASCS, Because the market price on feed grains and soybeans were so low at harvest time, farmers saw a need to have adequate farm storage facilities available on the farm. Others took advantage of the CCC approved warehouse in the county to store their grains,
