Uncle Pete From Chittlin Switch Says

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

Bug Hookum announced at the session at the country store Saturday night he had give powerful thought to the world money situation and had now come up with the answer.

What we got to do, Bug allowed, is forget all this talk about cheap dollars and high price of gold and come up with a new money. He said he had figured the thing up one side and down the other and had decided tobacco is what we ought to use.

They was a heap of side benefits to this plan, Bug explained. First off, it would help the health case agin smoking. Wouldn't nobody argue with the claim that if a feller smokes his money he can't buy food and if he ain't got nothing to eat he's going to git unhealthy fast.

The way things was now, Bug said, it looks like more people was making money by buying and selling money than by working for wages. What people ain't investing in them gold mine stocks was buying and selling them silver certificates for big profits off the Government. Bug was of the opinion we hadn't ought to let the value of our money be decided by ole man DeGall of Franca, that ain't never paid no UN dues and still owes us $6.8 billion for World War I loans, $300 million from World War II, not to mention all them American lives we give to save their neck from the Germans in both wars.

Ed Doolittle was complete agreed with Bug, and it's unusual for Ed to be full agreed with anybody but the Lord and Abe Lincoln. Ed said cheap money was a big reason the "Great" is gone out of Great Britain and the reason "Great" is fast going out of the Great Society. Ed was of the opinion our Government was using that old remedy that if a little money medicine was good a whole lot would be better. We got to stop and figger, Ed said, that when we water down the medicine to make it go farther we don't do nothing but make it weaker.

Personal, Mister Editor, I can't git too interested in world money affairs, considering how little money I was holding. I think the whole thing is up to Congress and I long been convinced the only answer to Congress is prayer.

Yours truly Uncle Pete

Several years ago an elderly man lived in a small town in Arizona who was known as Cactus Pete. He passed his time away by telling his experiences to tourists. The more he told his stories the less resemblance they bore to the facts. This is a characteristic, sometimes, of old age.

"Why, last week," he said on one occasion, "I was tired, and I went to sleep under a mesquite bush. When I woke up an hour later I felt a pressure on my chest. When I opened my eyes I discovered the reason for the pressure--a rattlesnake was sitting there, coiled and ready for business. I knew if I moved even one muscle I was a goner as sure as shooting."

"What did you do then?" a tourist chimed in, obviously excited by the story. "Well, seeing as how there was nothing I could do, I closed my eyes and went back to sleep," old Pete answered.

Now, you know, and I know that the old man had really told a big one this time. He had outdone himself. We know that literally no one could go back to sleep in the face of such danger. No one, but no one, could be that tranquil (or stupid) in the face of danger. Or could they?

Isn't that exactly what often happens in our lives? And isn't that what has happened to an appreciable degree in our churches? Dr. Dordthe Soelle, a theologian, said of the church in a speech given in 1965: "The church no longer asks if a person is a Christian, but if he is churchy. It offers a kind of fellowship that no longer interests most people. It looks with suspicion at the world. It is introverted, washing its own car every Sunday morning." If Dr. Soelle is right, and I think he is, this is a serious indictment of the church. Could the story of Cactus Pete be true? Has the church gone to sleep in the face of danger? Does it wash only its own car? I read recently the story of a blind man, aided by his seeing eye dog, who went into a large bank to apply for a loan. The loan officer got the necessary information, and, after some deliberation, informed the blind man that the loan could not be made. The blind man's dog, angered at this rebuff of his master, proceeded to bite the loan officer. He then cornered one of the bank's customers standing nearby and bit him. The loan officer, obviously shaken by the whole affair, said, "I can understand why your dog bit me, for I refused to make you the loan. But why did he bite a customer?" Whereupon, the blind man said, "Oh, he just bit the customer to get the bad taste out of his mouth after biting you."

Every true believer in God is, in a very real sense, a loan officer on the bank of heaven. He has at his disposal for the benefit of others all the assets of God's riches. Because he shares in those assets personally he can make them available to others. Not only can he make God's riches available to others but he, himself, can become God's blessing to others.

DAVID MANLEY

CAMP LEJEUNE - March 28 - Marine Private David Manley, son of Mrs. George H. Lee of Route 1, Magnolia, completed two weeks of training under simulated combat conditions in the fundamentals of day and night patrolling, employment of infantry weapons, survival methods and assault tactics at this Marine Corps base.

This individual combat training is given every Marine after his graduation from recruit training. Taught by combat experienced non-commissioned officers of the infantry training regiment here, it prepares the young Leatherneck to become part of the Marine air-ground combat team.

While in the field he was taught how to use hand grenades, a compass and the principles of map reading and land navigation. He learned how to detect and disarm mines and booby traps and, while being exposed to live machine gun fire, he learned to advance safely from one point to another.

From this course, he is scheduled to go on to more advanced training before being assigned to his permanent unit.
