decades. "I doubt that there has been any other county fair operated with as few problems as we have had," he said. "It's people like these here tonight that has made it possible."

The Nabuta farm and swine producer who has won many honors at fairs and livestock shows pointed out that interest in fairs has been great in Wayne County for many years. He displayed the first three ribbons he won - one blue, one red and one white - at the State Fair in 1931.

Fair directors and newsmen were told that the Wayne County Agricultural Fair now is one of the top three county fairs in North Carolina. Peele said this year's fair will have 40 acres of competition, two more than last year and more than the N.C. State Fair, and is expected to attract between 800 and 900 exhibitors.

Premiums totaling more than $16,000 will be offered for the most outstanding exhibits at the 20th annual fair and Peele expressed hope that all the prize money will be awarded.

An appeal was made for applicants for a flag-pole siter at the fair this year, Peele said this has become one of the most popular attractions at the fair. "I believe it draws more people to the fair than we could attract with a national champion bull," he said.

Entertainment was provided by Miss Beth Seegers, national champion bass twirler, and by Jimmy Sasser and the Carolina Cowboys, a country music group which will perform at the fair this year.

Door prizes were awarded with the grand prize of a Wayne County ham going to Mrs. Ruth Grady, editor and publisher of The Duplin Times in Kenansville, and Mrs. A.K. Holmes.
