Do you have an analytical mind? A Wall Street career may be your cup of tea.

A few years ago many college students ignored finance and chose the then glamour industries — advertising, television, public relations, electronics.

Not any more. Today, young people know that Wall Street offers a variety of jobs starting at salaries up to $10,000 — even higher for some skills.

Research is one job category. As the ranks of investors grow — there are 24,000,000 shareholders in the United States today, four times the 1952 figure — the big investment and brokerage houses expand their research facilities to give maximum service to their customers.
