My Christmas Tree

Through the stillness of the twilight,
On a breath of evening air,
Wafts a sound of glorious music,
From the throats of maidens fair.

Hark to the sound of children's voices,
Blending as they also sing,
Of the wonder of his coming
"Glory to the Christ, our King."

Long ago the Herald Angels,
Set the trend of our today,
Set the tone of our hosannas,
To the Christ through whom we pray.

Thanks to God for all the beauty,
Of our Christmas holidays.
To the One, who gave us music,
And a voice to sing this praise.

If our earth angels voices,
Never more we hope to hear,
May we never be discouraged,
Never let us feel dispair.
For Our Blessed Lord still lineth,
born anew in us, each day,
As we share each other's burdens
And also for each other, pray.
Doubt not this truth I'm saying,
Note the happily smiling faces
That we pass along the way.

If you'd come into his presence,
You must bend your neck just so,
Lest you stand too tall to enter
'Cause the manger door is low.

To the uninitialed,
Pray take the time to see,
That Christ does, all the lighting,
And all the world is a Christmas tree.

The Minister's Desk

By: D.E. Parkerson; Carrboro, N.C.

There was an interesting story in a Kentucky newspaper about three or four years ago. It concerened the exploits of a foxhound owned by a man in the eastern part of the state. He was the fastest dog that anyone had known.

He, however, had one peculiarity. He was a pacifist. He was always fast enough to catch any fox, but after he caught him he wouldn't harm a hair on his furry body.

Often in picking up the scent of a fox the dog would be near the back of the pack. But as the scent got stronger, indicating the y were getting nearer the fox, he would quickly come to the front of the pack. Once the fox came into sight he would put on a burst of speed and quickly out-distance all the other hounds.

With his speed it would not take him long to overtake the fox. But when he caught up with the fox he would go right on by--and keep running. The owner of the hound, according to the newspaper account of this unusual animal, said that he he never sees more frustration than shows in the face of the fox when he suddenly realizes that instead of being chased by the dog he is chasing the dog--and can't keep up with him!

This true story about a fabulous Kentucky foxhound is most interesting. In a very real sense it is a parable on life. It has much to teach us.

Many of us know what our goals are. Many of us have caught the scent of a worthwhile encounter with destiny. And we are running with the best of them to accomplish our aims. Rather than standing still, as many are doing, we are pursuing our goals with all our might. We are sparing no effort. We are not being distracted by side issues.

But tragedy of all tragedies, like the foxhound, we often run right on by our goals. In our youth the difficulty we have is usually not obstacles in our path but rather too many open roads. And woe be unto the young person who cannot make up his mind.

Realizing that when one reaches the age of thirty many former opportunities are no longer options many young people get in the race and run with vigor. Realizing that once doors of opportunity are closed they are hard to re-open they even seek to run at the head of the pack.

But then when their big chance comes they run right on by their encounter with destiny.

Whatever your goals in life run with your best effort. And when you reach your goal become involved. Give it your best. You will not have to look back later and talk about what might have been.

A "Has-Been" is bad enough. A "Might-Have-Been" is even worse.

Uncle Pete From Chittlin Switch Says:

DEAR MISTER EDITOR.

Clem Webster reported to the fellers at the country store Saturday night that he had saw where one college now has the dial-a-coach service. You dial a number and git a converation on the players and perdictions on how things was looking fer the next game. This was special good, Clem claimed the report said, fer newspaper writers that needs a quick interview.

Ed Doolittle was mighty interested in Clem's report. He was of the opinion we would soon be using computers instead of coaches and it would cut down on ulcers and heart trouble. A computer figgers the plays, a tape recorder talks to the players and sports writers, a student riot will be recorded and played back fer the cheering and the whole thing can be put on television without nobody doing nothing but the players.

Zeke Grubb said all this business of putting everthing on the automatic was giving him the cold sweats over politics and guvernment. First thing, we'll git dial-a-President and have two different answers, depending on which party we git on the line, Democratic or Republican.

Ed butted in to say he had already saw where the Democrats has set up a self-service welfare where you put in fer your own benefits and he's expecting any day now they'll have a machine right on the spot to print the money so they wo. be no waiting period.

Farthermore, claimed Ed, what we'll have in Washington is buildings full of computers and flashing lights and guvernment running on the automatic. We'll have automatic tax collections and if we git upset because the tax is 101 per cent of the income we can ring dial-a-Congressman and git a 24-hour fillabuster on how we're spending billions helping all them pore foreign countries git on the automatic.

Bug Hookum claimed that afore long a feller can git picked up fer public drunk by one of them breath testing machines on wheels, can put $30 in a mechanic judge box, be declared guilty and draw his sentence.

But Ed told the fellers he saw one advantage, that we'll git these political campaigns on the automatic dial-a-speech and git rid of the human reporters that has been serving as a link between the candidates and the voters. Candidates claims their messages git jumbled from the time it goes to the reporters ears until it comes out their pencils.

Clem put the stopper in the jug, Mister Editor, when he said we can probable come up with a can of consentrated stuff to be used fer instant education or instant politicking. All we'll have to do, Clem said, is open a can of confusion.

Yours truly
Uncle Pete

HOMEMAKERS, BY MARY A. BOWERS

Now that Thanksgiving is over we can turn our thoughts and energies to Christmas planning. Even though Christmas is almost a month away, there are many things that can be done now to help us avoid that last minute rush.

December seems to be such a short month-- there are so many things going on and so little time to do everything in. Maybe this check list of things to do early for Christmas will help.

SHOP By shopping early you can usually find the sizes, colors, and also gift preferences you are looking for. Many things ordered from a catalog have to be assembled or mailed to someone for a gift or returned because of wrong size or color; so, it is best to order early to assure yourself of plenty of time.

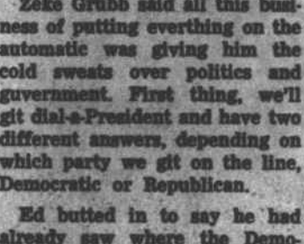
DECORATING Making your own home decorations can be fun and rewarding if you complete them! Tree ornaments, table decorations and linens can be made ahead of time and stored until needed.

CARDS Christmas cards can be addressed, signed, and stamped early. Also by doing this early, you will have time to write a friendly note to those special people you may miss seeing during the Holidays.

COOKING Christmas foods can be prepared early and stored in the freezer or in air tight containers until Christmas. Cookies, fruit cakes, and candies make wonderful gifts. Package in decorated containers (old coffee cans may be used for this).

MAIL MAIL EARLY--This is a must, to assure delivery on time! If you are mailing overseas, please check with your local post office for deadline dates. Be sure to wrap, tape, and tie packages securely.

BOON TO HOMEBUILDERS!



What saves you about $300 on each home you build, gives you quicker sales, and is good for at least 35 years?

The answer: utility poles, which carry electricity in overhead distribution systems. They are by far the most economical way of bringing electric lines into your lots, and you can pass the savings on to your customers—a sure way of spurring sales. Your customers gain another advantage—in the event of a power emergency, overhead lines provide the easiest access for restoration of service.

Utility poles mean that when your customers add major new appliances to their homes and need more electric power, they can get it quickly and easily with a new line to their home... something they'll surely appreciate.

Foundation For A Revival was the subject studied Friday evening when Long Ridge Church Auxiliary Women met at the home of Mrs. Johnny Singleton.

It was revealed in the lesson study that the foundation of revival calls for the broken heart. It also calls for a recognition of our sinfulness. When we pray for a revival, it doesn't always come because we are lacking in the many essential things required to bring a revival.

The group agreed to send a Thanksgiving offering to the Childrens Home at Middlesex. Plans were made for the Auxiliary Christmas party to be held Monday night Dec. 16 at the home of Mrs. Bud Davis at 7 o'clock.

Scripture reading was from Nehemiah 9 by Mrs. Johnny Singleton followed with prayer by Mrs. Henry Sutton.
