Jaycees In Action

Jaycee Week was a time to blow our own horn and beat our own drum. A time to point out to the people of our community, state, and nation how we have taken the lead in building young men and solving the problems of our communities. A time to pat ourselves on the back for a job well done. This is very true, and maybe well deserved.

It is also a time when we must take a look at ourselves as "Young Men of Action" and Americans. Just being born we have been given the birthright that most people on this earth would give anything for. We live in a nation where anything we want to achieve is possible and on the other hand we can do nothing and the welfare will feed and cloth us.

We of the Jaycees like to think that we are part of the solution and not part of the problem. One of our greatest responsibilities and freedoms is the right to vote. We should know the names of all the people who represent us at all levels of government. We must inform ourselves of all the issues.

Receives Masters Degree

Mr. Larry Lynn Smith, grandson of the late Maggie Smith of Rt 2, Pink Hill, N.C., and son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenwood Smith, 2821 Lynn Circle, Lawton, Okla., received his Master of Science Degree in Industrial Engineering from the University of Tennessee on December 8, 1972. An Open Letter

To Our Benefactors:

The staff at Cherry Hospital would like to extend their sincere appreciation to each group and individual who participated in our recent OPERATION SANTA CLAUS project. Because of the excellent response, each client was able to receive a Christmas gift to make the holiday season a little brighter. Being that hundreds of people participated in this project, it has been impossible to personally thank each and every one of you.

We extend a special thank you to the local chairmen and the local Mental Health Center for their cooperation and support on this project.

Best wishes for a very happy new year.

Sincerely,
Edythe Blanton

Library Tidbits

from J.d. archibald

Now that the long, dreary months of January and February are here, many Duplinites will want to settle down with a meaty, deep, interesting and thought-provoking book. Such a book is WHAT PRICE? by Alfred Adler. It was not intended to be a "best seller" in the usual sense, but it is a book which tries to "convert" anyone to a new cult or religion. The author does not expect everyone to agree with him; he does want the reader to think, to even disagree, to argue and above all, to question.

The author, Alfred Adler, is a son, school master, army, doctor, and physician. His first love is writing — and that, mainly for the theory and especially in the field of medicine.

But the question he poses by saying "years before has the physical world faced the threat that today hangs over the heads of the inhabitants like the Sword of Damocles. Death 'the last enemy', like a hungry, mad dog licks its chops and tugs at its leash. Luxation is no preventive. Education is no bulwark. Club and decorum afford no positive fendoverability. Is there an inch of safe ground that is not susceptible to nuclear war and its aftermath? Can anything be done concerning this state of affairs? Yes!" He backs his "yes" as the fact that Truth is God and God is Truth. Each chapter is treated as a separate entry in itself. There are chapters on God, Mind, Life, Substance, Creation, World, Power, Love, and Wealth to name only a few. It is not a work which tries to "convert" anyone to a new cult or religion. The author does not expect everyone to agree with him; he does want the reader to think, to even disagree, to argue and above all, to question.

The American people have become increasingly alarmed by fraudulent practices in business, phony companies and fly-by-night swindlers. So much so that the federal government has found it necessary to create special offices for consumer protection. Now there is a book written by Clint Gentry which deals with the subject in a factual, but warm and humorous manner: THE VULNERABLE AMERICANS. Mr. Gentry argues that "illegitimate operators annually reap $10 million from the new planned-for suburbs, $500 million from home-improvement schemes, $600 million from land-sales swindles, $1 billion from insurance rackets, larger service charges, increased taxes.

Besides discussing the types of frauds, the lives of some of the professionals of a bygone era are narrated and presented in contrast to the modern swindler. The modern fraud doesn't think of himself as a criminal, as did the fraud of yesteryear. Today frauds are dressed in respectability and often consider themselves businessmen. Finally, Mr. Gentry states that the modern swindler is law-abiding whenever possible and practical. "He seldom has a criminal record, for though he is sometimes caught and sometimes tried, he is rarely convicted, and the chances are that, even should this unusual event occur, his punishment will consist of a reprimand, a cease-and-desist order, or, at the most severe, a nominal fine which his company will pay and which may even be tax-deductible. He doesn't consider his methods fraudulent; they are necessary expedients to keep up with the competition. He doesn't even consider them unethical; everybody's doing it."

Both books are available at the Duplin County Library in Kenansville, and at the Wallace Library through inter-library loan.
