Pharmacy Comments

RX FOR AMERICA

Imagine, if you can, spending your summer months tending a herd of goats 6,000 feet "straight up" in a remote mountain pasture. Or, being shocked by the "premature" death of a loved one who has failed to live his "normal" hundred years!

Such are life's expectations to the people of Abkhazis in southern Russia. Acclaimed as the world's healthiest and longest-lived people, over 5,000 of them have reached or surpassed the century mark in age!

The life-style of Abkhazians vividly illuminates the problem Americans face in living a long life. Most of us have become physically soft and mentally unprepared to live much past 70. Perhaps if we pharmacists could just develop a new Rx for America that'd alter some of our basic attitudes and expectations, then maybe we, too, could look forward to seeing our hundredth year!
