Booze: Teenage Enemy

"When alcohol is so well protected," says Dr. Arthur McBay of the UNC School of Pharmacy, "is it any wonder our kids think of us as hypocrites when we threaten them about the use of drugs?"

His logic makes sense. Everyone's worried about LSD, marijuana, mescaline, and amphetamines. Yet not a single death has occurred over the last three years in N.C. due to these drugs. Though several deaths can be attributed to harder drugs such as heroin and barbiturates, the real culprit is, hands down, alcohol. The point is clear: As long as adults continue abusing alcohol as openly and freely as they do, we certainly cannot expect our youngster's "voluntary prohibition" of booze and drugs!
