The less energy we have, the fewer jobs we'll have.

Between now and 1990, there will be 23 million more people who need jobs in America. In this area, it'll be about 500,000. And the only way that this area can provide that many more jobs is to build more plants and businesses. But that can't be done without a supply of energy. At the same time, it takes CP&L 12 years to build a nuclear plant; 6 years to build a coal-burning plant. So we have to build now to be ready for those workers in the future. But we may not have to build as much or as fast, if everyone does everything they can to conserve. So do what you can at home and at work to cut down on wasted energy. Because the more you get out of your energy dollar, the more we can get out of ours. And the less our bills will have to go up later on.
