Sunday School Speaker
Dr. Austin Carter presented an informal program, "I Seen You When You Done It," Sunday at the regular Sunday School hour of the Presbyterian Church. For the past year the Sunday in each month has been designated for a special program to be held in the fellowship hall, trying to improve the Sunday School. The program was not only for the children but for adults as well. Dr. Carter stressed so many points on church etiquette that seem so insignificant to most, but are so true and most find they are guilty. For example, Closing your song book and dropping it into the rack before the song is finished. The program was made understanding to the small children by drawings and simple illustrations.

Home and Garden

It Pays to Plan - As the spring planting season approaches, it is well to devote time toward planning landscape work both at the new home or in the re-landscape of an old established yard. Careful planning usually makes the difference between poor and excellent results. In the long run, good planning can save you many hours devoted to maintenance of landscape plantings.

A few suggestions to follow in planning the landscape of a new yard or the re-landscape of an established yard include:

1. Place shrubs out far enough from the wall of building so they have room to grow and develop into strong plants. A shrub too near the wall can cause stain, possibly rot.
2. Strive not to use too many varieties of shrubs in a foundation planting. Many smaller homes need no more than four to six different kinds of shrubs. Too many forms of plant materials around a building will give a cluttered appearance. It is easy to overdo the planting if you have a fondness for shrubs. Use all extra plants in a shrubbery border to hide unsightly views.
3. Take time to prepare a good planting hole for shrubs and trees. They can never be any better than the soil in which they grow.
4. If yard areas are not uncomplicated in their design and plantings, make them so. Group your plants; avoid string plantings of bulbs, annuals and perennials. Also strive to group shrubs for ease in care as well as harmony in design.
5. Use low or slow-growing shrubs beneath windows. Never let a plant grow up over a window.
6. Don't clutter the lawn area with a helter-skelter planting of large shrubs, trees and ornamentals.

Have you ever grown carrots in your garden? If not, you should try them. There are several types recognized by horticulturists but present varieties generally fall into four basic types — Chantenay, Danvers, Imperators and Nantes. Recommended varieties four our area include Danvers, Half-long and Spartan Bonus. In North Carolina carrots can be grown in both spring and fall. In Duplin County seed in early to mid-February and again in mid- to late-June. Control of nematodes is essential for well-shaped roots. Cover very shallow — about 1/8 inch.
