Kenansville's LBD (liquor-by-the-drink) may be the worst thing to happen to its town board yet. Already tempers have flared and board members are voting in opposition of one another. Each side — if there are sides — is saying they want to be fair. . . However, we do not live in a utopian society where everyone is treated fairly. . . An example of the town board not being fair ended the night's meeting. . . the board went into executive session — which is not fair. . . The board, trying to be accommodating, agreed to the plea from The Country Squire for satellite annexation for the purpose of selling LBD. They did this before researching the ins and outs of this and other possible proposals. . . Before them is a request for annexation. The tax paid on the property is $262. If it is called commercial property, the tax may increase to $522. The attorney said the legal fees are expected to be about $500, which the town will have to pay. . . So, if annexed at the present time, the town stands to lose the first year $248 — or make $22. This is not counting services expected by the town police, as well as billing and collecting the said taxes. . . It is possible for a person to, in this LBD annexation, sell only beer once annexed. Therefore the town makes no additional money from the LBD. Is that fair? Is it fair to allow some LBD pieces to sell beer on Sunday and not allow other places that sell beer six days a week, not to sell it Sunday? Is it fair that the policemen make more money than the men who pick up trash and garbage? Both jobs are important. . . I guess it is fair to say Kenansville's town board has a fair-size mess on their hands trying to be fair. . .

The light from Andromeda, the closest galaxy to our own, began to travel to us before the first true man appeared on earth.
