

Goodman For Files Re-Election

District Court Judge Rodney R. Goodman filed on January 27 for re-election in the Eighth Judicial District. He was elected to the bench in 1980 and is currently completing his first term.

Judge Rodney Goodman

Goodman, 38, graduated from UNC-CH in 1967 and received his law degree in 1972 from Wake Forest University. He served in the U.S. Army and obtained the rank of sergeant. Upon completion of law school, he entered into private practice of law in Wake County before returning to Kinston. He has served as an assistant district attorney and was special counsel to

Letter To The Editor

Dear Sir:
As the campaign for Governor progresses, it is obvious that certain candidates have subscribed to having letters written to the Editor to grossly mislead the public about the positions of the candidates. One such letter has been directed at Eddie Knox's position on the East Carolina University Medical School.

I have had the pleasure of knowing Eddie Knox for over fifteen years. I am a graduate of East Carolina University and now serve as Chairman of its Board of Trustees. During the debates about the Medical School being established, I know that Eddie Knox's position was not antagonistic to the major objective of building the Medical School. His main interest was making certain that we had a good school that was funded appropriately. The Medical School was built while Eddie Knox was Chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission and, under Eddie's leadership, the Commission recommended over 138 million dollars for its development. Of this amount, 134 million dollars was appropriated by the State Legislature.

It has been my experience in knowing Eddie that he is a fair-minded and open person. I have no reservations about his continued support for East Carolina University and, more particularly, its Medical School.

Very truly yours,
C. Ralph Kinsey, Jr.

Care of Brass

Brass trays, wall hangings and coffee pots are usually pretty easy to take care of. Usually a regular dusting and an occasional washing in lukewarm water is all the care that brass requires.

Notice that I said lukewarm water. You should never use hot water on brass. Many brass objects are lacquered to prevent tarnish. Hot water will loosen the lacquer, causing it to peel, and once this happens, you will have to remove the lacquer with a thinner before you can re-tackle the tarnish problem.

If brass needs special attention, you can remove soft particles by scraping with a wooden spoon, plastic scrubber or rubber spatula. Then wash with a lukewarm, mild detergent water.

Simple oxidation usually responds to commercial brass cleaners. Or you can make your own brass cleaner by combining one part non-sudsy ammonia to two parts denatured alcohol, and two parts distilled water. Add enough whitening to make a thin paste. If whitening isn't familiar to you, you can buy it at art, paint and hardware stores.

Once your brass object is cleaned, apply a thin coat of tung oil to give it a soft luster. Or, if you wish, you can use a clear acrylic or lacquered spray. However, if tarnish should penetrate the finish you will have to remove the lacquer before you can tackle the tarnish.

Popular numbers

The next time you eat out, take a close look at the price of your food. Chances are the last number will be a nine, a five or a zero.

If you are eating at a fast-food place, your food may cost 99 cents or $3.99. But nine seems to be a magical number.

Think about it. If you find a seafood platter of $3.99, you feel you have a bargain. If that same platter costs $4.03, you subconsciously feel that the manager is trying to make a few extra pennies. In other words, we like change for our greenbacks.

Now, if you go to a restaurant where meals are priced between $7 and $11, you may find the most popular last number if five. And zero seems to be a common ending digit for meals in exclusive places.
