Former JSTC Visiting Artist Presents Exhibition

David Curtis Smith, a former visiting artist at James Sprunt Technical College, returned to the area with an exhibition at the Herman Park Art Center in Goldsboro. The exhibition, entitled "Four Years On," marks the close of Smith's work in the North Carolina Visiting Artist program and residencies at technical colleges in Kenansville and Sanford. "Four Years On" is an exhibition of work Smith completed as a visiting artist. Smith is pictured above as he prepares to hand the exhibition in the Art Center Gallery in Goldsboro.

Artist Holds Exhibition

Two years after ending his residency at James Sprunt Technical College visiting artist, reflections of Duplin County can be found in the exhibition of David Smith's paintings which opened last week in Goldsboro.

May 11th marked the opening of an exhibition of Smith's work at Herman Park Arts Center on Ash Street in Goldsboro. The show, Smith pointed out, is the exhibition which hung in Sanford earlier this month concluding his residency as visiting artist at Central Carolina Technical College. The exhibition entitled "Four Years On" is a show of paintings Smith has completed during his visiting artist residency at JSTC in Kenansville and Central Carolina in Sanford.

"Being a visiting artist has been good for me," Smith said. "An artist is a communicator whether he is using a brush or speaking and the past four years have been good experience, allowing me to build my verbal communication skills." As visiting artist at JSTC, Smith spent much time in the public schools working with students. The second half of his visiting artist residency was spent in Sanford working mainly with civic groups and guest lecturing in Central Carolina humanities classes.

"College age is the group I feel I have the most to offer; that was the time in my life when I decided to become an artist," Smith said. "Teaching art has been a long-time goal of mine and the visiting artist program has helped me prepare for that profession." Smith began his career 10 years ago and has exhibited in noted museums and galleries in the East and Midwest. He is a graduate of East Carolina University and obtained a master of fine arts degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The exhibition currently in Goldsboro reflects Smith's years as a visiting artist and four of the new works are of an old and practically torn-down house in Warsaw. While one piece is a color study, Smith said "Hidden Hearth," "Into the Foyer," and "Emerald Ascent" are three new major works done from photographs of the abandoned house in Warsaw.

"Emeralds Ascent" combines naturalism with imaginative use of color. Smith had been trying to perfect the technique and finally mastered it after a three-week fellowship studying with noted artist Richard Anuszkiewics at the Atlantic Center for the Arts in New Smyrna Beach, Fla. last summer.

"An artist should never stop learning," Smith said. "The study fellowship encouraged me to experiment with colors I had never used before and apply the colors in ways I had never used them. 'Emerald Ascent' is a result of ideas in the use of color I learned from Anuszkiewics.

"The incentive for my art lies in my search for an elusive, fleeting visual experience. My objective essentially is to create a heightened sense of reality; to bring a freshness or clarity to that which might be overlooked or unseen. My intent is to create a dramatic confrontation between the viewer and the subjects of my paints," he said.

Smith is a native of Rockingham. The "Four Years On" exhibition will be displayed until June 11 at the Art Center Gallery of the Herman Park Arts Center in Goldsboro.
