

Duplin Will Supply Copy Machines

A divided Duplin County Board of Commissioners voted last week to lease three copying machines for the use of the three N.C. National Guard units in the county.

In the same motion, the board agreed to have the guard units draw supplies for the machines from the county, which can purchase the material in large enough volume to get lower prices than the individual units can.

"You've just voted to spend $100,000 to $150,000 in taxpayers' money for something that the state and federal governments should be doing, and I don't feel the people of Duplin County should be taxed to pay for what they (state and federal officials) should have been doing," said Commissioner D.J. Fussell, who voted against the motion.

Commissioner Dovie Penney made the motion to lease the equipment by altering her original motion to purchase the machines. Voting to lease the machines were Mrs. Penney, W.J. Costin and Calvin Coolidge Turner. Fussell and Allen Nethercutt opposed it.

Mrs. Penney first moved to have the county purchase the machines. She asked County Finance Officer Russell Tucker's opinion. He suggested leasing the machines through the county and allowing the guard units to obtain supplies from the county because "we buy supplies cheaper than the man who would sell the supplies (to the guard) can buy them."

Suspended Terms Given

Mahlon Terry Wallace, 31, of Kenansville, received two suspended sentences, three years on probation and a $1,000 fine after being found guilty of two counts of taking indecent liberties with minors.

Superior Court Judge Henry L. Stevens said it was the first time while he was on the bench that he didn't give a "Class A" felon an active sentence. Stevens said he believed Wallace needed help and didn't pose any danger to the public.

The judge ordered Wallace to obtain any necessary treatment from the Duplin-Sampson Mental Health Center in Kenansville.

The jury also found Wallace guilty of one charge of indecent exposure. He received on this count a 90-day sentence to run concurrent with the other sentences.

Wallace was arrested April 7 on a rural road near Warsaw by Duplin Sheriff's Department after two 11-year-old girls claimed he made improper advances and exposed himself.
