Condensation Inside Windows

I hope you haven't noticed condensation inside your windows, but if you have, keep this in mind: That water can cause a problem if it collects on your wooden sills for several seasons.

What can you do about it? Well, you could use a humidifier to reduce humidity to the recommended level for the winter months. By the way, that recommended level is 30 to 40 percent. And this humidity level holds just as true for the kitchen and bathrooms as it does for the rest of the house, so this means your kitchen and bathrooms need to be well ventilated.

Storm windows also help to reduce condensation because they allow the interior glass to stay warmer. But you may still see condensation on the inside of your storm windows or in between the two windows. And that is why all storm windows should have weep-holes at the bottom. If your storm windows do not have these, drill a couple of 1/4-inch holes outdoors at the base of the window.

If condensation appears between your storm windows, there is an air leak. And, if you see water collecting on the outside window, check for air leaks from inside the house. Chances are you will be able to seal the leaks with weather stripping.

Public Thanked In Letter To The Editor

Duplin Times
Kenansville, NC 28349

Dear Editor:

It is with a great deal of pride that I write to you, and through your newspaper, offer our sincere appreciation to the citizens of your community for supporting a very successful Bike-A-Thon for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

St. Jude, the largest childhood cancer research hospital in the country, is dedicated to one cause: to eliminate childhood cancer and other catastrophic diseases from the face of the earth. Please be assured that the funds raised in Kenansville will be used to support those research programs which show promise of finding cures for those horrible diseases that threaten the lives of children.

There are many people to thank, namely: our chairman, Mrs. Barbara McKay, helpers, the riders, donors, merchants, the media, and other volunteers.

We want you to know that progress is being made and that someday, hopefully soon, we will be able to close the doors to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital because the goal of eliminating cancer will have been reached.

Thank all of you for bringing life and hope to children everywhere.

Sincerely,
Roger Redding
Southeast Regional Director
St. Jude Children's Hospital
