Be Specific When Calling Directory Assistance

To reduce operating costs and continue providing good telephone service, Carolina Telephone is consolidating certain operations, including directory assistance.

W.S. Richardson, Carolina Telephone's district commercial manager, said, "Today our directory assistance operations are handled at just three locations — in Fayetteville, New Bern and Rocky Mount, compared to 13 locations in 1978, resulting in substantial savings."

Because directory assistance operations are centralized, customers need to be specific when they request numbers, Richardson said.

"Tell the operator the city you are calling," Richardson said. "If the operator asks for your number, give all seven digits. Then tell her the full name of the person or business number you need and write down the number when the operator gives it to you."

Richardson added that directory assistance operators can only numbers, they cannot dial calls. Being prepared, customers usually can get the numbers they need in a matter of seconds, he said.

Richardson reminded customers they are allowed five free local directors assistance requests per month. If they exceed this, they are charged 20 cents for each additional call. They are charged 50 cents for each intrastate directory assistance call they make, with no allowances. However customers will be allowed two free interstate directory assistance calls each month provided they make two such calls during the same billing period.

To avoid charges, Richardson advises customers to look up numbers in the phone book. "It's also a good idea to jot down frequently called numbers and keep them near your phone," he said.

Duplin Bassmasters Take Prizes At Lake Waccamaw

The Duplin County Bassmasters spent St. Patrick's Day on Lake Waccamaw. The crystal clear shallow lake was very stingy giving up many bass. Most fish were caught fishing grassbeds with buzzbaits, crankbaits and worms. Pat Matthis of Warsaw pulled the heaviest weight from the scales with Jimmy Blizzard of Beulaville only nine ounces behind. Blizzard had the winning fish in the boat but the fish came unhooked and flopped overboard.

An alligator that splashed very close to two anglers changed the pattern as well as their fishing location. Sparks from a cigarette started a glove smoldering. The wind made the glove smoke heavily five minutes after the cigarette was extinguished. The interesting result is that the angler was wearing the glove the whole time. No injuries were sustained, but fishing was halted while the glove was thrown in the lake and the fishing partner laughed in the bottom of the boat.

Keep your fish alive in '85.
