

Along The Way

By Emily Killete

Each Duplin high school has a yearbook. One of the first yearbooks published in the county was done in 1935 by the Warsaw school.

Yearbooks for today's students and those in 1935 mean quite a different thing. High school yearbooks are done by a professional printing company and contain color and black and white photographs as well as illustrations. Early county yearbooks were done at the school by the students through the use of a mimeograph machine!

The April 25, 1935 issue of the DUPLIN HERALD contained the article about the student publication. Unlike today, students ended their school year the last week of April. A reprint of the article, "Students Issued Handmade Annual" follows, and credits some of the talented people who helped put together the school's first yearbook.

Students Issued Handmade Annual

"Warsaw Hi-Lights of 1934-35" is a most attractive annual gotten out by the senior class this year. The drawings and illustrations are original and bespeak artistic talent of the contributing students.

The front cover has an accurate drawing of the high school building by Miss Thelma Siler, a senior. T. Eason's illustration of the high school faculty is most humorous.

The first page carries names of the board of editors, followed by senior scraps in rhyme illustrated by Miss

Siler with two seniors in cap and gown. Senior superlatives and important events of the year follow:

E. Boney illustrated the junior section with the drawing of a ship on the sea of life and W.H.S., the light house sought. The juniors' two pages record the main happenings of the year, and lists the class roll.

The sophomores' pages show the "Wise Old Sophs, Owl." Their pages are filled with the wise doings of the year.

Walter Woodward is the illustrator.

A building labeled "Success-

Life," with steps leading up to it on which the freshmen are climbing was drawn by Mr. Moore. Their pages are labeled "Tid Bits."

The seventh grade by F. Croom shows a boy studying. Many important events occurred which they placed on their page.

Henry Stevens, III, drew a Micky Mouse opening a curtain for the grammar grade page. Each important event of the year is recorded on their page.

The George Reed Department of Home Economics has one of the best pictures in the book.

The music department has several illustrations of instruments and announcements. A page is given to clubs, a page to the P.T.A. and a page to the library.

This was drawn by F. Croom. The last page is Sports-Sparks which tells of the teams and games.

This is the first annual produced by the Warsaw school and does credit to a much larger school. It was made possible by the presentation of the mimeograph to the school by the P.T.A.
