Engel Appears As Charles Dickens May 16

The Friends of the Duplin County-Dorothy Wightman Library invite you to spend an evening with Charles Dickens on Thursday, May 16 in the Hoffer Auditorium of James Sprunt Technical College.

Dr. Elliot Engel, associate professor of English at N.C. State University, portrays the 19th Century English novelist in an entertaining one-man show. In the program, Dr. Engel relates Dickens' fascinating life and career during the Victorian era of England, then becomes Dickens, presenting selections from the author's works such as Oliver Twist, The Pickwick Papers, and A Tale of Two Cities.

Dr. Engel's enthusiasm and lively reading will delight newcomers to Dickens and exceed the expectations of confirmed Dickens lovers. The audience will come to know the acclaimed English novelist as he was in his own lifetime.

A graduate of Indiana University and UCLA, Elliott Engel is the founder of the Dickens Disciples, a literary and social club in Raleigh which meets monthly to study the novels of Charles Dickens. The club is the largest of 60 such societies throughout the world.

Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance are $2 for adults and $.50 for students. They are available at the Dorothy Wightman Library or may be purchased at the door.
