May Better Speech And Hearing Month

May has been designated Better Speech and Hearing Month in the United States.

Nearly 20 million Americans, approximately 10 percent of the population, suffer from a speech, language and hearing disorder.

Speech and language disorders are inabilities of individuals to understand and/or appropriately use the speech and language systems of society. Such disorders may range from simple sound repetitions or occasional misarticulations to the complete absence of the ability to use speech and language communication. A child with a hearing impairment is more likely to miss varying portions of the instructions or conversation surrounding him/her than the normal hearer. This hearing loss can cause problems ranging from missing a portion of a word or sentence to missing the majority or all of the verbal interaction surrounding the person. This individual does not receive the same input as a normal hearer, thus usually resulting in greater efforts being necessary for understanding.

Many students who have undetected communication problems may be labeled as inattentive, disruptive, underachievers or retarded.

More than three million children of all ages are estimated to have varying kinds and degree of communicative impairments. School districts in the U.S.employ speechlanguage pathologists to provide many specialized professional ser-

Patricia Dobson, Sharon Wallace and Nancy Williamson are the speech-language pathologists employed by the Duplin County system, where they provide services in 10 elementary schools. Services are provided to children with delayed language skills, voice disorders, stuttering, hearing if moderate - to - severe articulation defects and language, speech and hearing disorders associated with cleft palate, cerebral palsy, intellectual impairment, emotional or behavior disturbances, visual impairments, aphasia, and other conditions. Other repsonsibilities include identification of students, planning services, thereapeutic / instructional service delivery, program organization and management, liaison and professional growth and ethics.

As an early intervention strategy, each year all kindergarteners are assessed in several areas, including communications and hearing. This allows for early detection of speech, language and hearing disorders which may hinder normal learning and language development.

As part of the ongoing hearing conservation program, children throughout the county in grades first, third, fifth and seventh are screened annually to identify possible hearing losses. Approximately 3,000 students were screeneu during the month of March.
