Auxiliary Convention

The educational focus of the meeting was on "Who's Taking Care of the Children?", a program that brought speakers from throughout the state to discuss problems of day-care, child abuse, working mothers, and the stresses on children in today's society. The Medical Auxiliary of Duplin County and other auxiliaries across the state will be giving attention to these problems on the local level in the coming year. Other focus areas are: Young Adolescents; a Latch Key Problem, Teen Driving, Osteoporosis and Day Care for the Elderly.

students from East Duplin, James Kenan, North Duplin and Wallace-

Rose Hill high schools participated in proficiency testing in one of four vocational/technical program areas: carpentry, masonry, power mechanics or business education. Students could receive up to one quarter's worth of credit. Students testing in business education areas could receive credit for several introductory-level courses in business skills areas such as typing, computer programming, accounting and others.

Jesse Outlaw, director of vocational-technical education at JSTC, reported that proficiency credits were achieved by over 200 students in nearly 300 different courses in this year's round of testing.

The local Auxiliary received an award from the state organization of "Research and Romance of Medicine" due to its work in compiling the "History of the Physicians of Duplin." The book is available through the auxiliary. Past President Helen Boyette received the award from 1984-85 N.C. Medical Society Auxiliary's President Linda P. Nance of Wilmington. Honorable mention was given to the 1984-85 scrapbook which depicts the auxiliary's activities this year. Roberta Lee and Beverly Haynes were responsible for putting the scrapbook together.

Maggie Ammar will be serving on the 1985-86 N.C. State Board of Directors as chairman of the bylaws and Helen Boyette will serve for another year as state treasurer. Darlene Young of Greensboro was installed as the incoming state

Outlaw cited many advantages of the articulation program to the students who participate and to all of the institutions involved in the cooperative effort.

"A major advantage of awarding advanced standing is that students are rewarded for their previous efforts, and the time required for them to finish an occupational program and begin seeking employment is reduced," he said. Outlaw also pointed out that the reduced amount of time required to complete a technical program results in signifigant personal savings for students and the saving of county and state tax dollars.
