county 4-H council.

Laurie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Swain of Warsaw and a 1985 graduate of James Kenan High School. She plans to attend Meredith College in Raleigh this fall.

The 4-H Development Fund, headquartered at North Carolina State University, was organized in 1958 by friends and alumni of 4-H to help support certain phases of 4-H work. Charles A. Hayes, chief executive officer of Guilford Mills in Greensboro, and president of the Fund, says the scholarship is awarded for college study during the 1985-86 academic year. The award recipients are selected on the basis of their high school records, evidence of college aptitude and 4-H achievement.

Lois G. Britt, county extension chairman with the Duplin County Agricultural Extension Service, states "Roxane is an outstanding young lady who has worked hard as a 4-H'er during the nine years she has been in 4-H."

Some of Roxane's accomplishments include winning district honors in 4-H public speaking contests and record book competition, and county honors in projects and activities, including egg cookery, beef char-grill, talent, electric and fashion revue. She is presently serving as vice president of the 17-county Southeastern District 4-H Clubs.

Rotary's Shadow Program Gives JSTC Students View Of Working World

Three students at James Sprunt Technical College are participating in a new program sponsored by the Warsaw-Kenansville Rotary Club to give the students "field experience" in the careers for which they are preparing.

Called the "Shadow Program," the project pairs a student with a specific career interest with a person employed in that field. For part of a working day, the student accompanies, or shadows, that person as he or she goes about the routines of the working day.

"This pairing of student and professional provides the student a realistic and first-hand view of some of the requirements and responsibilities of the career he or she is preparing for," said Ralph Cottle, coordinator of the program for the Rotary Club.

The Rotarians have sponsored the "Shadow Program" for students in the county high schools before, but this is the first time the program has been implemented at JSTC. Three students, representing three different career programs, are participating in the program this quarter.

Beverly Cole, majoring in protective services/criminal justice, spent part of a day with Dennis Albertson, county probation officer, learning about the probation and parole officer's responsibilities, case loads and typical duties.

Mary Gardner, accounting major, spent a day with Bob Brumleve, comptroller for Quinn Company, a large grocery wholesaler with a fully computerized accounting and distribution system.

Boyd Davis, majoring in electrical installation and maintenance, is scheduled to work with the county's electrical inspection department as his "shadow" experience.

Students and instructors alike are finding the program to be a very beneficial experience, according to

Jess Outlaw, director of vocational/technical programs. "The students who have participated so far have found the experience very meaningful," he said. "They only wish they could spend more time in it. We appreciate the sponsorship by the Rotary Club, and certainly hope the program can continue," he added.
