

Little Stories About Men and Affairs by Aaron M. Jones

THERE'S AN INTERESTING document hanging in the Louisville and Nashville Railway Station of Nashville, Tennessee. It reads:

To you who enter this station as a person or friend, we who manage it give you welcome.

"We may never see you or know you, but we want you to feel welcome."

"Human beings are here to care for you and protect you. They are all of flesh and blood as you are. They have their hopes and ambitions, dreams and disappointments just as you have."

"We are no going to intrude on you but leave you to your own desires. Whatever rules there is have been made for your protection and comfort; not to annoy you."

"A good rule for a station is the Golden Rule. Do as you would have others do to you."

"We believe that the average American is courteous, quiet, law-abiding and willing to do right."

"May you find comfort here. May you have a safe and comfortable journey. May the friends and loved ones have come to bid goodbye to you, comforted and happy on their way. May those whom you come to greet and meet be filled with happiness at your coming."

"We are travellers from the Port of Birth to the Haven of Rest, so God keep you, stranger, and bring you your heart's desire. And when you go from here may you leave a bit of grateful feeling."

A wrinkled, weary, worn old gentleman cashing in an all night over-erm eating "joint," busily reading the "Country Gentleman" with a magnifying glass.

I pass a policeman on a street corner. He looks funny to me; I look at him again. He salutes and greets: "How are you today, sir?"

Asked a newsboy what he does with the papers he doesn't sell. He replies, "There ain't none." "But how do you always sell them all?" I asked. "Dat's easy boss; I just goes where der's ot of guys who ain't got papers and hollers."

Have you ever noticed that dollar bills usually have the appearance of a much worn pair of overalls, while twenty dollar bills most always have the ironed and pressed look of the front of a Sunday shirt.

Some people look as though they have walked through a long life with a corn on every toe.

IN CHICAGO, THE CITY WHERE it was estimated that some 15,000 people turned out en masse to the funeral of a bandit king, future meetings of the City Council will be opened by a prayer offered by leading members of the clergy. The city officials bashfully justify this innovation by saying that if it does nothing more, it will tend to further dignify the council's proceedings. Resolutions adopting this measure were in the following words: "It is common usage in all legislative bodies in the civilized world as well as groups of men assembled for any gathering to begin their deliberations with an appeal to God for blessing and guidance. The best of men in all ages have not deemed it derogatory to their dignity to bow their heads in reverence at the undertaking of any great problem in life." It is an influence in the right direction when bodies whose duty it is to enforce man-made laws to

Hates to Get Up, But-

Fowler McCormick, heir to the Harvester millions, is working for $20 a week in a Milwaukee mill and living at a $4 per week boarding and rooming house. A fellow roomer says "Mac hates to get up at 5 A. M. but is 'gams' and he does."

at the opening of each session to consider the Laws of God.

THE THUNDER CRACKED CRASHED and rumbled like bombardment of howitzers, and the lightning, not to be outdone by its serial plymate, lit the heavens with long forked flashes, signaling the approach of hail which soon fell like spent shrapnel, Virginia cried. Why shouldn't a girl cry when she's left alone by her parents. The same storm even caused gray heads to shudder with apprehension.

"Little Fool" commented dress wearing person No. 1. "Come here Virginia, the storm won't hurt you," consoled dress wearing person No. 2, and encircled in her arms Virginia soon forgo the storm.

SURE, WE MEET NO. 1 and 2 God pity her with her owl spectacles and mannish ways. She sighs and the world is so full of a number of things—that weary her. "Won't you tell those children in the yard to be more quiet. I can't stand their shrill laughter." And when she dines. "Jane bring my hot water immediately. You know I always take it right after my soup, and the meat you gave me for the ca was impossible. She couldn't eat it." And she comments, "No, I never like to go to the party. Too many silly spooning couples."

SHE NEVER MARRIES The plan of things as they should be does not include such a marriage. They teach our schools, take care of cats and criticize our youth—and carry our women's rights banners.

BUT NO. 2, GOD BLESS her with face that says the world is so full of a number of things,—that I love. "Children with broken toys tell her their troubles. At meals in breakfast a lovely attentive couple she saw while strolling through the park. Less exuberance she relates about. She marries, and you and I think of childhood; of stubbed toes and broken playthings and see a face glorified through God-given women's rights. Our hearts throb and we breathe a prayer for mothers.

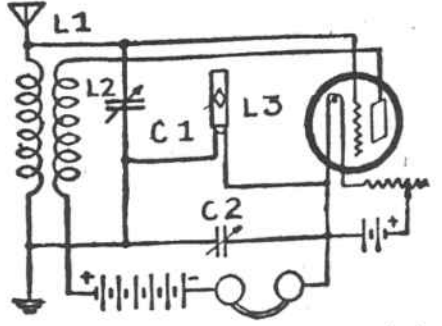

The Original Doctor Faust. Dr. Johann Faust, around whom have sprung up the various legends bearing his name, was a magician and astrologer of evil reputation. He died about 1538, being carried off, it was then believed, by the devil.

RADIO

Single-Tube Set That Is Super-Regenerative

This is a new single-tube receiving circuit, known as the Nacireman. It was developed during a series of experiments with a large number of receiving circuits. This new circuit is not suitable for wired radio because of its tendency to re-radiate, but it is probably the last word in a simplified single-tube set for receiving news and music from the present broadcasting stations.

The circuit is described in the interests of amateurs and the public who may wish to listen to the programs now in the air. The set is super-regenerative. It requires a minimum investment in parts. Practically every amateur already has everything necessary to try out the circuit. It will be noted that all resistances, grid leaks and grid condensers have been eliminated and no filter circuits are required.

quiled. Any amateur can connect up one of these sets in an hour or two and the results will surprise the most hardened radiophan.

Almost any metallic structure which may be picking up radio waves may be used as an aerial. Connection to a bed spring, wire window screen, steam radiator or fire escape is often all that is necessary. A short overhead aerial, a length of wire strung across the room, concealed behind the picture molding or under the carpet, will also serve.

Tuning is accomplished by rotating the movable coil of the variometer or variocoupler until the tube oscillates. Then adjust condenser No. 1 until the station desired is heard, finally adjusting condenser No. 2 to the frequency of oscillation which brings in clear speech and music. A second fine adjustment all around will increase the volume and some regulation may be secured with the filament rheostat.

- 1 variometer or variocoupler. L1 is the rotor winding. L2 is the stationary winding. 2 23-plate condensers, preferably with verniers (C1 and C2). 1 750-turn DL or honeycomb coil or its equivalent (L3).

- 1 tube, WD-11, UV-201A, or other hard tube. 1 tube socket. 1 filament rheostat (R). 1 A battery, 1 1/2 to 2-volt for WD-11 tube; 6-volt for other tubes. 1 B battery, 45 to 90 volts for WD-11; 45 to 135 volts for other tubes. 1 pair phones.—Radio Digest.

Anti-Body-Capacity in New Shielded Panels

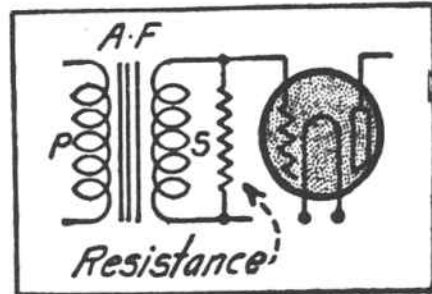

A new shielded panel is now available, for which the makers claim excellent anti-body-capacity qualities. The shield consists of pure perforated tin and is attached to the panel by a patented process. The adhesion of the tin is perfect. Sections of it may be cut out with an ordinary penknife.

The new panel has a hard rubber base with a low sulphur content and is artificially aged to minimize discoloration. Particular care is taken to proportion the filters and process of vulcanizing so as to obtain a high dielectric strength and surface resistance and a low phase angle difference and dielectric constant. Its machining qualities are excellent.

Besides the standard black finish the panels are furnished in all sizes with or without the shielding, in oak, mahogany, walnut and birdseye maple. These finishes are applied to the surface of the panel by a special process, which is accomplished so as to make it difficult to tell the panels from the real woods which they represent.

Proper Transformer Always Best to Use

Use of a high resistance such as a grid leak across an audio amplifier is usually merely an attempt to tandem a transformer and tube which do not work well together. The resistance simply introduces enough loss to make the two balance. Use of the proper transformer would seem to be more rational.

"The Lady of the Woods," in early English folklore, is Kalyb, who stole St. George and brought him up as her own. St. George enclosed her in a rock where spirits tore her to pieces.

Favored by Conditions, Moose Are Multiplying

George Cotter, game warden of Seward, Alaska, just back from an inspection trip, declares there are 5,000 moose on Kenai peninsula alone, while from the Yukon come similar reports. The marshy country along the Stikine and Tanana rivers is some of the best moose region in the North. Where did all these moose come from? There is a theory of Alaskan origin, that moose have been driven from the Canadian northeast by the continual banging of guns year after year and, finding their way slowly through the wilderness, have crossed the mountains into Alaska. The big animals have found climate and food conditions ideal. Hot summer with luxuriant growth of willow and birch, marshy lakes with lily roots, and dense evergreen forests for cover, offer moose pleasant home surroundings. In some regions they are free to roam at will and increase, for miners have left, the Indian tribes are decimated by disease, and it is too far inland for ordinary hunting trips. The average Alaskan moose weighs from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds and stands eight to ten feet high at the shoulders. Only the head, neck and antlers are usually shipped out by hunters, but the meat is excellent and the hide of value for leather products.

Fright Worked Cure in Arm Long Paralyzed

Fright has cured Russell Lewis, Seneca county (Ohio) farmer, of paralysis, says the New York World. Lewis' left hand had been paralyzed for three years. He was alone in his home near Bascom recently when he heard a noise at a rear door.

Fearing some one was trying to break into the house, Lewis caught up an ax handle with his left hand and started for the door.

Suddenly he realized he was using the hand which had been helpless for three years. He stopped and moved his hand, working his fingers back and forth.

With a shout of joy he ran from the house, discovering as he did so that a pet dog, scratching at the door, had been the cause of his alarm.
