New Year "Water Feast"

In Burma the new year, which occurs in April, is celebrated with a "water feast," which consists of young men and women throwing water on each other and on the passers-by.

Defining a Politician

The term politician was first used in France in 1569 and referred to men of wisdom and cunning, of artifice and deep contrivance, but never rising to the height of real statesmanship.

Baffling Burglars

As a protection against burglars, an English bank has fitted its safety vault with a periscope through which a policeman on his rounds is enabled to view the interior of the vault from the outside of the bank building.

Lets the Bills Tell

"Can your wife keep a secret?" "I'll say she can! She never lets on how much she has ordered when she returns from shopping."

Chanting the Psalms

This custom was adopted by Am brose from the pagan ceremonies of the old Romans, about the year 300. Three hundred years later Pope Greg ory the Great added tones and estab lished singing schools.
